NEW REVOLT THREATENS IN BRAZIL

Prestes Believed Planning Coup; Firing Heard in Rio de Janeiro Streets

RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 27. — (AP.) — Possibility of new trouble in Rio de Janeiro was indicated today when the sound of firing was heard in the center of the city.

No details of what was going on were available but the populace was warned by army officers to stay off the principal streets.

The Minister of Justice issued a communique in which he said it was untrue that part of the military police of the city had revolted

SITUATION IN HAND

His communique said that the provisional government was taking active steps. It added, somewhat enigmatically, that the government had the situation in hand after two hours.

NEW REVOLT FEARED

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 27.—(INS.)—Rumors reaching here from Montevideo, Uruguay, today declared that Dr. Julio Prestes, who was chosen president of Brazil in the last election, is planning a counter coup against the revolutionary regime which deposed the administration of Washington Luis.

The rumors could not be confirmed here. A strict censorship is still being exercised over all news emanating from Brazil.

Had it not been for the successful revolution, Dr. Prestes would have been inaugurated president November 15, when Washington Luis' term of office legally expires.

COUP PLOTTED

Dr. Prestes' coup is being planned in the state of Sao Paulo, which was the last to capitulate to the revolutionists, the rumors declared.

Dispatches from Rio Grande stated the revolutionaries were continuing to concentrate their forces in the states of Rio De Janeiro and Sao Paulo for the purpose of backing up their plan to overthrow the provisional military junta now in control, whose

WEST HEARS FINAL TALKS BY PINCHOT

Socialist Candidate and Two Others Taken After They Defy Police on Meeting

Police action featured political activities in Pittsburgh today. Highlights of the day's activities were:

1—J. H. Maurer, Socialist candidate for governor and two associates were arrested on the steps of the City-County building for holding a political rally after being refused a police permit.

2—The South Pittsburgh Water Company, through its president, denied official sanction had been given its general manager's letter requesting its empoyes to work against Pinchot.

3—Pinchot, with street and radio meetings, was winding up his Western Pennsylvania campaign.

The Socialist candidate for governor and two others were arrested at noon today as a squad of police prevented a scheduled Socialist rally on the steps of the City-County Building for which Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh had refused a permit.

Just as Arthur G. McDowell, 22, of 934 Rainey street, Wilkinsburg, an organizer for the Socialist party, began to address a small crowd in front of the building, he was taken into custody by police. James H. Maurer, candidate for governor on the Socialist ticket, and Director of Public Safety of Reading, Pa., a scheduled speaker, was then arrested.

A short time later Louis Weissbast, 49, of 1429 Howard street, was arrested.

Both Walsh and Public Safety Director James M. Clark explained the permit had been refused because of the congestion caused by the Pinchot demonstration Saturday. They apparently had forgotten that the Socialist permit had been refused Friday—the day before the G. O. P. meeting was held.

The prisoners were taken to the Bureau of Traffic in the rear of the building, and a few moments later a patrol removed them to Central station. They were charged with violating a city ordinance, and will be arraigned tomorrow morning in Central Police Court.

A party of sympathizers, headed by William J. Van Essen, Socialist candidate for United States Senator, followed the men to the station, where, after pooling their funds, the prisoners were released on $[illegible] bail each.

POLICE GUARD ASSIGNED

Following his refusal to grant the permit, Supt. Walsh ordered a squad of police to patrol the vicinity of the City-County Building with orders to disperse and arrest any persons who attempted to hold a meeting.

Protesting Police Supt. Walsh's refusal to grant the permit, Rabbi Samuel Goldenson and the Rev. Dr. Albert E. Day, representing the American Civil Liberties

Mrs. Keith Miller Sets Flight Record

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—(INS.)—Mrs. Keith Miller, New York aviatrix, today held the women's two-way transcontinental flight record. She arrived here Sunday afternoon from Los Angeles, completing the eastward flight in 21 hours and 47 minutes. A week ago Mrs. Miller lowered the east-west record of Miss Laura Ingalls by 4 hours and 44 minutes.

Lights for Elephant Decreed on Highway

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—(AP.)—On the road to Mandalay where the modern motors sway! A tourist has come from India with news that the automobile traffic from Colombo to Kandy is so heavy that headlights and tail-lights, white in front and red in back, have been decreed for elephants on the hilly highway.

TRIAL OPENS IN PARK KILLING

William Hartlep, 54, supervisor of North Side parks, pleaded not guilty when arraigned in Criminal Court today, charged with the murder of George Joseph Nieberding, 16, of 616 Sherman avenue.

Nieberding died in the Presbyterian Hospital, June 28, after he was struck on the head with a baseball bat by Hartlep, the Commonwealth alleges, in an argument over the playing of baseball in West Park, the day before.

FOUR WOMEN CHOSEN

Eight jurors, four of them women, had been chosen when the noon recess was taken. Assistant District Attorney Earl R. Adair, for the prosecution, asked no questions regarding conscientious scruples against capital punishment. He said he would ask for a first degree verdict with life imprisonment.

Attorney E. G Coll, for the defense, challenged every prospective juror who had an only son of about the same age as the dead youth. Visiting Judge William A. McConnell, of Beaver County, presided.

TRIO ON TRIAL

William Cobb, Jr., alias Bubble Davis; Ross Turner and Will Manuel were arraigned today in connection with the death of Julius McClure, 29, of 2901 Spring way. McClure is said to have suffered a fractured skull in a fight at Twenty-ninth street and Spring way June 7.

The third case, scheduled for Wednesday, involves Georgia Ann Madison, held in connection with the shooting of Andrew Bettis, Negro, 27, of 1620 Foreside street, who died last May 10.

"Baering" Down On the News With Arthur "Bugs" Baer

The reason for the Brazilian revolt shows that South American wars are getting more conservative if they must have a reason.

During the last election orders were given to chuck out all Democratic votes. They have those things down there, too.

Now, a Democratic vote is something like a monkey's child. Not much to look at. But it's all his own.

So Brazil elected a Republican. And that causes trouble anywhere.

Brazilian admiration of American men is shown in the slugging, shooting and looting in Sao Paulo.

They should also admire American women and get some alimony along with it.

War is war, and so is peace. King Boris got married 'n Italy and took 5,000 soldiers along with him.

Now, 5,000 soldiers isn't even a huddle when Mussolini is around. He furnished 15,000 more soldiers just to make the affair real private.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 27.—Thirty-four hours from Pittsburgh. It seems almost incredible—yet we are here. And what a sight flying down over those Rockies into the Golden West.

Spread out 15,000 feet below as we soared over the Cajon Pass, San Bernardino to the left blinks the first greeting in a myriad of lights clustered below like diamonds. The Colton, Riverside, Uplands, Ontario, Pomona and finally the wonders of a brilliant metropolis, Los Angeles spreading miles in every direction, and we glide gently down

HOOVER URGES NAVAL TRUCE

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—Declaring that a race in naval armaments must never again be allowed to develop, President Hoover addressed the peoples of three continents today as he joined with Premier MacDonald, of Great Britain, and Premier Hamaguchi, of Japan, in celebrating over an international radio hook-up the legal consummation of the London naval treaty, under which the great powers have severely limited their navies.

The final step necessary to put the London treaty into effect was taken in London this morning when the powers deposited their ratified copies with the British foreign office. Oddly enough, it took place on American "Navy Day," a day set apart in the United States for the glorification of the nation's sea power.

Both the British and Japanese premiers joined with Mr. Hoover in high praise of the London naval conference, and all expressed the hope that the fruits of that meeting may be widely extended.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—Princess Mary, daughter of King George and Queen Mary, and her husband, the Earl of Harewood, congratulated themselves today on their narrow escape from injury when their limousine collided with a roadster at Moortown, Yorkshire, while they were driving from Leeds to Harewood House.

Both cars were badly damaged, but neither the princess, her husband nor the woman occupant of the roadster were injured.

'NOT BUSINESS FOE'—PINCHOT

Gifford Pinchot today challenged his opponents to mention a single occasion in which his first administration was hostile to legitimate business and to point out a single plank in his present platform that is calculated to injure any business willing to be satisfied with a square deal from the officials of the state.

HITS MUD-SLINGING

Pinchot declared the campaign of his opponent, John M. Hemphill, Democratic-Liberal nominee is a confused and unconvincing repetition of mud-slinging and abuse. Pinchot said:

"Hemphill's increasing violence and bad temper is likely to convince the voters he has seen the handwriting on the wall. He is showing all the signs of a poor loser.

"Two recent outbreaks in the Liberals' campaign of flagrant misrepresentation were a speech by E. T. Whiter, vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, whose president, W. W. Atterbury, is directing the fight against me, and another by A.

League Will Care For Babies While Mothers Vote

Dormont mothers may go to the polls on election day, November 4, secure in the knowledge that their babies are being cared for while they exercise the right of suffrage.

Members of the Dormont-Mt. Lebanon League of Voters have circularized the borough with letters informing mothers that members of the league will care for children while mothers are at the polls.

Women with small children at home were informed that by calling Lehigh 1434 or Lehigh 3204-J they can secure the service offered by the league members.

PINCHOT LOSES FUND SUIT

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Common Pleas Court today dismissed the suit brought by Gifford Pinchot, Republican candidate for governor, and his associates who sought to prevent the Philadelphia city committee from collecting and distributing campaign funds and to prevent the issuance of watchers' certificates to that organization.

The bill named 46 of the 48 Philadelphia ward leaders who recently bolted the Pinchot candidacy and the three county commissioners as defendants.

Judge Wm. C. Ferguson, in giving the decision, characterized the petition as "the most scandalous, impertinent and frivolous document that has ever been filed with the court."

Chinese Reds Fire On U. S. Gunboat

HANKOW, China, Oct. 27.—(AP.)—The gunboat Luzon, flagship of the American Yangtse River patrol, was attacked by a Communist shore battery 15 miles below Yochow, Hunan, late yesterday.

The Luzon, opening fire with three-inch rifles and machine guns, quickly silenced the Reds' field pieces. An unidentified British gunboat was reported attacked near the same place later.

UTILITIES CHIEF BANS COERCION

BULLETIN.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 27—(AP.)—The board of directors of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company today took cognizance of charges made against it and its officers in the political campaign in Pennsylvania, principally by Gifford Pinchot, by issuing a statement to stockholders, its employes and the public, denying the various charges made.

A letter written by A. B. Lynn, general manager of the South Pittsburgh Water Company, urging employes to vote against Gifford Pinchot, Republican nominee for governor and branded by Pinchot as coercion, today was described as "wholly unauthorized," by E. A. Geehan, of New York, president of the company.

In a telegram to the Sun-Telegraph, Geehan stated it has always been the policy of the company to refrain from participating in the politics and that Lynn's views were only his own. Employes are to be informed, Geehan said, that the company "makes no inquiry as to an employe's political affiliations nor do such affiliations have any effect

Censor Answers Pulpit Attack by Earl Carroll

BOSTON, Oct. 27.—(INS.)—City Censor John M. Casey, who said he favored the proposal of Florenz Ziegfeld to engage Calvin Coolidge as national theater censor at $150,000 a year, today replied to charges made against Casey from the pulpit of the Channing Unitarian Church by Earl Carroll, theatrical producer.

Asserting that Carroll had held him up to ridicule and attempted to gloss over the truth by saying that he (Casey) bases his censorship on such trivialities as girls appearing stockingless, the city censor said:

"He knows I would allow his girls to appear without stockings if they wore decent costumes. Boston does not ban bare legs, but it does ban indecency."

Speaking from the pulpit yesterday, Carroll declared:

"God made beautiful legs, and I am sure no covering could be as beautiful as the bare leg of a girl.

"I like to think of my God as a God with a sense of humor. The hardest thing in the world to create is a laugh. Casey destroys laughs, but he doesn't give me one for each one he eliminates.

"I am sure my God has a sense of humor. If He didn't he could never have created so many of us."

Snyder Marital Troubles Shifted to New York

Judge Elder W. Marshall, in Common Pleas Court, today ordered Stewart R. Snyder, of 5251 Wilkins avenue, member of a prominent Pittsburgh family, returned to Jamestown, N. Y., where charges of deserting his wife and their three sons, aged 8, 10 and 12, are pending.

Extradition papers had been signed by the governors of New York and Pennsylvania, but Snyder fought extradition on the ground that the alleged desertion did not occur in New York.

The wife, Mrs. Margaret M. Snyder, testified they were married in 1916, came to Pittsburgh to live in 1925, and returned to Jamestown in 1926. She said Snyder lived with the family several months after their return to New York, then deserted them.

Snyder was denied a divorce here last January. Mrs. Snyder sued her husband's mother for alleged alienation of her mate's affections, and the case was settled on payment of $1,250 to the wife.

Mrs. Snyder said her objection to living in Pittsburgh was that they were compelled to live in a garage in the rear of her mother-in-law's home in Fifth avenue. She testified Snyder paid her $17.50 a week for two years, but that these payments stopped last July.

WOODS ENLISTING BIG BUSINESS IN DRIVE TO AID JOBLESS

SEEKS HELP OF ENTIRE NATION

Relief, for Most Part, Must Comes From States and Cities, Says Director

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—As Col. Arthur Woods, federal employment director, concentrated his efforts in New York today to enlist big business and finance in his campaign for "jobs for the jobless," organization work was going forward here to unite the entire country behind the employment drive.

Reports were being compiled from various sections of the country as to exact unemployment, and with the arrival here of Frederick C. Cruxton, of Columbus, the task of organizing regional relief was begun. Cruxton will have the job of applying the "Ohio idea" of coordinating state, municipal and private construction projects, to the Middle Western and Great Lakes states.

WORST SECTIONS

It is in these states that unemployment and hardship is said to be of larger proportions, chiefly because winter struck that section first.

Regional directors for other areas will be appointed shortly to extend the plan over the entire country. In many states, employment aid has been going on for some time, and part of the efforts of Col. Woods' organization will be to act as a clearing house for information and to guide localities in the light of what has been accomplished elsewhere.

PLANS UNDER WAY

Evidence of what the Federal government is doing, and the possibilities of aid from this direction, was given the Woods committee today by Senator Glenn (Rep.), of Illinois.

For Illinois, he said, the treasury reports plans are now under way for 14 buildings in 13 cities to cost $19,085,000.

Glenn pointed out, however, that for most complete relief, aid must come "largely from the states and municipalities themselves, and from the organizations and citizens of the different states."

The senator, a member of the [illegible] and Postoffice Committee of the Senate, said that a [illegible]s" effort would be made, however, when Congress meets in December to enlarge the current $115,000,000 building program.

FOREMEN HIRED FOR JOBLESS

Twenty new foremen, cost clerks, and timekeepers, who will take charge of the 700 men to be hired by the city as part of its program to relieve unemployment, reported at the Department of Public Works today.

Tomorrow the first 120 laborers hired will report for duty. Practically the 700 men, who are to begin work soon, will be placed on sewer construction jobs, it was said.

The emergency program, prepared by the city to meet employment conditions, includes the construction of the swimming pool in Highland Park.

HARTFORD CITY, Ind., Oct. 27.—(AP.)—Eighteen children were hurt, two seriously, near here today when a school bus driven by Ralph Walker, 40, plunged 15 feet into a shallow creek and was demolished. Beulah Wentz, 7, and Harley Miles, 13, were the most seriously hurt. Walker said the steering wheel buckled.

OFFER VARGAS OFFICE

RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 27.—(AP.)—Insurgent generals in both North and South Brazil, wary of betrayal of their cause, today steered clear of committing themselves to co-operation with the new military Junta in control here until they could be sure of its intentions.

The Junta, ordering disbandment of federal reserves called out to defend the Washington Luis administration against the revolution, telegraphed Getulio Vargas, president of Rio Grande Do Sul, offering him the national presidency for which he was defeated in the recent national elections.

Messages from Punta Grossa, headquarters of Vargas, said he had refused the invitation temporarily until guarantees of the Junta's sincerity were given him, these guarantees to include surrender of all federal troops.

In the north, Capt. Jaurez Tavora, commander of the Parahyba army, which captured Pernambuco, and augmented by volunteers, swept the states of Alagoas and Srergipe, entered Bahia after some desistance from police and was acclaimed by the multitude.

DR. LUIS PRISONER

The deposed president, Dr. Washington Luis, who still refuses to sign a resignation, spent his sixtieth birthday yesterday in Fort Copocabana, where he is confined a virtual prisoner in the quarters of the general staff.

HAMBURG, Germany, Oct. 27.—(INS.) — Further details were being awaited by the Hamburg-American line here today of the shelling of their liner Baden by Fort Copacabana in Rio De Janeiro harbor.

Latest reports received here from the German minister in the Brazilian capital stated that 25 persons, including a German stoker, were killed when the shell struck the ship. Of the 25 seriously injured, six were Germans, while from five to eight Germans were among the 30 slightly injured. The remainder were all Spaniards.

The Brazilian authorities have promised a state burial for the victims and indemnity for the injured.

L. Humphrey, president of Westinghouse Air-brake Company, who might be suspected of having a business reason for desiring to please Atterbury.

FLINGS CHALLENGE

"I challenge Mr. Whiter and Mr. Humphrey to mention a single occasion in which my first administration was hostile to legitimate business or to point out a single plank in my platform that is calculated to injure any business willing to be satisfied with a square deal from the officials of the state.

"I hope the rest of the people of Pennsylvania have been getting as much fun out of this campaign as I have. The longer it lasts, the more the wonder grows that people, presumed to be sensible, can put out the kind of statements which are quoted in the newspapers as coming from our opponents.

"The Philadelphia 'gang', for example, is loudly proclaiming that I am not a good enough Republican for it and is therefore urging its followers to vote for a Democrat.

"According to the opposition, I have never done anything for the conservation of forests and other natural resources, and I see in the papers from the same authority that I appear to have been one of the worst enemies the public schools of Pennsylvania ever had. If I am as bad as they say I am, then I should have been deported as an undesirable citizen years and years ago.

INDORSED BY LABOR

"I am proud to have the indorsement of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, yet the same authority I have been talking about would have you believe that I am a fiendish foe to the laboring men in Pennsylvania.

"Having thus robbed me of all character and respectability, my opponents proceed to predict dreadful things for the Commonwealth after I am elected. Business is to be destroyed, unemployment is to increase, all the woes of the world are to be concentrated in the state of Pennsylvania when Pinchot is governor.

"These same prophecies of disaster were made in 1922. None of them came true. None of them will come true now. But from the beginning of the world, the prophets of evil have had free rein in predicting dreadful things. And since the beginning of the world they have been wrong nearly all the time."

Union, charged police official with discrimination.

The charge was made at a conference of the clergymen and the police superintendent in the latter's office.

Walsh denied the charge. He said that meeting held Saturday at the building added greatly to the congestion caused by the Stadium football attraction, and announced that in the future he would not grant permits for demonstrations in front of the City-County Building.

RAILWAYS PROTEST

The superintendent cited a protest he had received from the Pittsburgh Railways Company in which, according to Walsh, the traction company complained of the congestion caused by the G. O. P. rally, and in which they asked that future demonstrations be held elsewhere.

Allen G. Harper, executive secretary, Pennsylvania American Liberties committee, made the following statement:

"The Socialists permit was refused before Saturday, when the Pinchot meeting was held. Police were able last week to foresee the traffic difficulties which would arise from a Socialist meeting, but were unable to foresee the similar difficulties which would arise from a Republican meeting."

CHARGE FAVORITISM

"However, Mr. Walsh has said there will be no more meetings on the steps of the City-County Building, and we will have to wait to see how this new regulation will be enforced. A Civil Liberties committee has no desire to press the police for a permit which will interfere with the safety of citizens, but in this case it seems to me that police have not applied their discretionary powers with an equal hand."

Discussing the refusal, Director James M. Clark, of the public safety department said:

"We did not issue a permit for the Socialist meeting today because we thought it would interfere with traffic. Saturday's meeting created a traffic condition that was entirely unsatisfactory, and we have received complaints from the railways company and others.

"We have definitely decided to ban the holding of all other meetings in front of the City-County Building in the future."

Vare for the Senate when his salary was $8,000 a year.

HEMPHILL HERE TOMORROW

The Democratic party's local campaign will reach its peak at a rally tomorrow night in North Side Carnegie Music Hall, according to David L. Lawrence, Democratic county chairman. A street demonstration will precede the meeting and all indications point to a capacity crowd.

Scheduled speakers are John M. Hemphill, nominee for governor; Sedgwick Kistler, for United States senator; Guy D. Bard, for lieutenant governor; Lucy D. Winston, for secretary of internal affairs; Judge A. E. Reiber and George F. Douglas, for judges of Superior Court. Campaign Chairman Charles Alvin Jones will preside.

Prior to the meeting, Democratic women of Allegheny County will be hosts at a reception to Mrs. Hemphill and Mrs. Kistler.

Chairman Jones has issued a statement declaring Gifford Pinchot, Republican nominee for governor and Senator Joseph R. Grundy worked "hand in hand" during Pinchot's former administration against labor and welfare measures. He said:

"Pinchot's tie-up with Grundy and his subservience to him in matters affecting the public welfare, of itself, demands the defeat of Pinchot."

HOME LEADER BOLTS

Local headquarters of the Liberal party has announced that Asa B. Martin, Republican chairman of Pike County, home of Gifford Pinchot, Republican nominee for governor, has declared for Hemphill.

The Pike County chairman was reported to have forwarded to Republican State Chairman Edward Martin a letter announcing an intention to support Hemphill and offering to resign as Republican county chairman.

The letter stated:

"Pinchot has scrapped the Republican state and county committees and set up his own Pinchot-for-Governor chairmen; that he has always worked to destroy our party from within; that the Pinchot controversy with Secretary of Labor James J. Davis (Republican nominee for United States Senator) is a recent glaring example of trouble making."

The Liberal party's news release for today includes a report of a speech of James H. Maurer, Socialist nominee for governor, at a meeting yesterday in the Pitt Theater, Penn avenue.

Maurer, who is a former president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, gave Pinchot credit for having interceded during the anthracite coal strike but declared that all his other acts as governor had been hostile to organized labor.

ASSAILS RECORD

Maurer was quoted as stating that Pinchot resorted to "contemptible trickery" in refusing to fulfill a promise to support a proposed amendment to th Workmen's Compensation Act. The speaker was reported to have said:

"His conduct toward the compensation act was no worse than his conduct toward all our other bills. He never as much as crooked his finger to help us with the result that during the four years this self-styled apostle of all that is good in the world served as governor, labor got nothing."

Pinchot is reported as having the support of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor in his current campaign for another term as governor.

A resolution was adopted at yesterday's meeting protesting against the refusal of Pittsburgh officials to grant Socialists permission to hold a street meeting in front of the City-County Building such as the Republican rally last Saturday.

Voting Highest Patriotic Duty Coolidge Declares

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Oct. 27.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

The law of action and reaction does not work anywhere more certainly than in our system of self-government. We get out of life exactly what we put into it. Surely the people can get out of their government only what they put into it. In a republic the people are sovereign. They can manifest their sovereignty from day to day through the avenue of public opinion. That will have some influence on their government.

Calvin Coolidge

But their greatest opportunity and their gravest irresponsibility are on election day. With a careless, indifferent, uninformed electorate a republic will deteriorate into a very bad form of government. It will fall into the hands of the incompetent and the vicious. Good government under our system depends on the ballot box.

A general election comes on November fourth. All the voters should plan now to be at the polls. It is the highest patriotic duty. The great sacrifices made to establish self government will have been in vain unless this responsibility is discharged. It is a time when the serious second thought of the people is needed. We cannot receive what we do not give. Put good government into the ballot box.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

'Golden Horseshoe' Rivals Stars at Opera Premiere

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER,
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—All optics, socially speaking, will be divided this evening between the "golden horseshoe" and the spacious stage at the Metropolitan Opera House.

For, on the later, Martinelli, De Luca, Mueller, Branzell and other world renowned songbirds will warble the majestic "Aida," which will usher in the operatic season, while the members of Gotham's super-fashionable set, arrayed in costly sartorial armor and wearing an abundance of priceless jewels, will turn the far-famed "golden horseshoe" into a dazzling, scintillating diamond circle and will fittingly welcome the advent of another season.

In addition to the rank and file of the "old guard," a number of new hostesses will make their appearance in the boxes that form the first semi-circle at the Metropolitan and a number of out-of-town guests will add eclat to the ensemble.

Every box and seat for tonight's performance was taken weeks ago, and from the orchestra stalls to the topmost gallery the Metropolitan will be crowded with those who go to the opera to be seen, to see—and to hear.

DEATHS OF TWO BROKERS LAID TO PACT

Firms' Heads Killed Selves So Insurance Would End Debts, Police Believe

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 27.—(AP.)—The possibility of a suicide pact between Sidney F. T. Brock and George K. Reilly, members of the brokerage firm of Reilly, Brock & Co., who ended their lives with pistols within three days of each other, was under investigation by the police today.

Reilly shot and killed himself on his estate at Gladwyne, a suburb, Thursday, and Brock took his life by the same method in a Central City apartment house yesterday. Forty-eight hours before his death Brock assigned the assets of the brokerage firm to officials of the Pennsylvania Company for Insurances on Lives and Granting Annuities so that liquidation for the benefit of creditors might be facilitated.

BROTHER PAYS TRIBUTE

Reilly and Brock each left $700,000 worth of uncontestable life insurance for the benefit of the firm. They had policies aggregating $1,000,000 each. Sigourney Mellor, head of an insurance brokerage concern, said today, but some of the policies contained a suicide clause which made them uncollectable. The insurance was taken out in 1913, 1914, 1916 and 1929.

John W. Brock, Jr., A brother of Sidney, expressed the belief today that the partners had committed suicide in order to satisfy their creditors. He said:

"My brother and his late partner, George Reilly, were two of the finest and most upstanding characters I have ever known. Undoubtedly they both gave up their lives so that the debts of their company could be wiped out and their creditors satisfied. I feel sure that my brother did this act so that his children could live, knowing that when their father died he left no debts and owed no one."

FIND 3 NOTES

The book assets of the firm were given in the assignment petition as $5,723,573 and the liabilities as $5,353,280. It was also set forth that the concern had further collateral of a book value of about $4,000,000, which was pledged and held by banks for loans aggregating $3,448,229.

Three notes were left by Reilly, two to his butler, and one to Brock. The contents were not disclosed.

Brock was 46 and was a member of an old Philadelphia family. He is survived by a son and three daughters. He was divorced several years ago. Reilly was 54, a bachelor, and also socially prominent.

2 SUSPECTS HELD, BAIL $10,000

2 Others Forfeit Bonds, Fail To Show Up at Hearing; Some Fined for Selling

The University of Pittsburgh, through W. Don Harrison, director of athletics, today in Central Police Court announced it would press charges against all persons arrested for selling counterfeit tickets for the Pitt-Notre Dame game on Saturday.

Nathan Cherkos, of Philadelphia, arrested twice, and Julius Foreman, 511 Herron avenue, were held for court in bail of $10,000 each at a hearing before Magistrate Leo Rothenberg in Central Police Station today. They were charged with fraud and forgery. Barney Cherkos and Joseph Silow, who forfeited bond for a hearing Saturday, failed again to appear today and police are hunting them.

TELLS OF GETTING TICKETS

Nathan Cherkos testified he came here from Philadelphia to deal in tickets, and was told that the tickets were all sold, but later got 134 from a man he said represented himself as a member of the Pitt athletic council. He said he later bought some at downtown ticket offices.

Bernard Colton, 19, of 2304 Shady avenue, and William Shedlack, 19, of 212 Hawkins avenue, Rankin, were fined $2 each in Morals Court when they promised Magistrate Thomas D. Jones they would return the money they got selling counterfeit tickets.

James Greer, bell captain in Hotel William Penn, had Colton arrested, saying he had paid him $64 for six tickets that proved spurious.

PROMISES TO PAY

Shedlack, from whom Colton said he got the tickets for $35, admitted the sale. He promised to return the $35, and Colton said he would give Greer his $64.

Al Modell, 36, of Jackson street, arrested with 25 alleged counterfeit tickets, was held for further hearing in Oakland Police Station. Neal Halpin, Stadium usher, who was said to have been selling ticket stubs after their owners had been admitted on them to the game, also was held.

C. J. Barry, 26, of Robinson street, was fined $10 in Oakland Station for selling tickets. M. C. Davis, "city," was fined $25 after he was identified as a seller of counterfeit tickets.

Sam Shapiro, South Bend, Ind., was held in Central Station as a suspicious person, after detectives arrested him in Hotel William Penn Saturday afternoon. He could not account for possession of five tickets said to be counterfeit, according to police.

FOIL MAIL PLOT IN M'KEESPORT

A janitor early today surprised robbers, looting the McKeesport postoffice, who fled, leaving behind a pile of packages which they had carried to the lobby, and a vest containing numbers writing pads by which police traced two suspects.

William Perkins and Teddy Clark, Negroes, of 917 Brick alley, McKeesport, were arrested. Police say they confessed to entering the postoffice. The vest matched the coat and trousers of one of the two, it was said.

The marauders cut open numerous registered letters and C. O. D. packages. Postmaster J. B. Hershey said, but apparently made no effort to crack the safe.

With the arrival of the janitor, Louis Landolph, Negro, the thieves fled out a front window through which they had entered after breaking the glass and releasing the latch.

KIDNAP BANKER, SEEK RANSOM

GALVA, Ill., Oct. 27.—(AP.)—Earl Yocum, banker and Galva's wealthiest citizen, was missing today, apparently a hostage in the hands of extortionists.

The banker and land owner disappeared last Saturday night and no further word was received from him until late last night when his wife announced receipt of a special delivery letter.

Mrs. Yocum refused to reveal the contents of the letter or to indicate whether it might have been a demand for ransom. Police also were uncommunicative. It was reported in other quarters that Yocum wrote he was being held for ransom, but that so far no harm had come to him. Another report said the letter swore Mrs. Yocum to secrecy.

A posse was organized yesterday and all highways within a 50-mile radius were put under watch, but no trace of Yocum or his supposed kidnapers was found.

DRY AGENT SHOT AT INDIAN FETE

BANNING, Cal., Oct. 27.—(AP.)—Death joined the solemn dance to the dead on the Morongo Indian reservation four miles from here and brought a week of fiesta to an inglorious end.

A dozen Indians were in the house. They resented the intrusion of the white man. Olsen backed out. A shot was fired and Olsen dropped, wounded in the heart. Several Indians were arrested as material witnesses while the Department of Justice took charge of the investigation.

Mummified Hawk Heralds War, Peace

LONDON, Oct. 27.—(AP.)—A story of a mummified hawk which has dripped blood coincidentally with the approach of war and peace, comes from Lord Robert Baden-Powell. He saw it in a friend's private museum. His friend told him that a month before the Boer War started, brown bubbles oozed from the hawk. They ceased a month before the war ended. The same thing started a month before the World War began and a month before the Armistice. The friend found the mummy in Egyptian excavations. It is supposed to be 4000 years old.

DUCE PREDICTS FASCIST SWEEP

ROME, Oct. 27.—(AP.)—Benito Mussolini, premier of Italy and Fascist generalissimo, in an address to government officials today on the eve of the eighth anniversary of the Fascist march on Rome, called for a hardening of his party's policy against its foes and predicted a wholly Fascist Europe within two decades.

The Duce said that having "unmasked" this hypocritical Europe which talks peace at Geneva and prepares for war at home, his legions nevertheless would continue to combat all antagonisms and expel their enemies until none remain.

Speaking in Venezia Palace, the Premier declared that the doctrines and ideas of Fascism had become worldwide, but that the opposition forces were centering their attack politically upon Italy. He called this "moral opposition" and asserted it was but preparation for military war.

Finger Language Lands Beggar Fake in Jail

Speechless three weeks, he learned the one-hand deaf-mute alphabet.

Yesterday a man knocked at his door and handed him a note which read:

"I am deaf and dumb. Can you help me?"

Willfhoft gesticulated rapidly on his fingers. The beggar smiled. So, the policeman escorted the mendicant to the station, where he was identified as August Fleming, an ex-convict.

"How did you guess?" asked Fleming.

"Easy," the officer replied. "I called you a prevaricator, and you smiled."

TROLLEY CRASH HURTS WOMAN

One woman was injured and several persons were bruised when a Mt. Lebanon trolley car, carrying 14 passengers, collided with a train of empty cars in the South Hills yards of the Pittsburgh Railways Company today.

Mrs. Lillian Rock, of 153 Sycamore street, was treated for slight lacerations by a physician and was later taken home.

Motorman A. B. Weiner, of the Mt. Lebanon trolley, was unable to explain the cause of the accident, as was Divisional Superintendent W. P. Hagmeier, who is in charge of the yards.

First reports said that a dozen persons were hurt.

Officials said Frank Noel, motorman on the train, attempted to run away from the trolley, thus averting a more serious accident. Noel, in his report, said:

"I stopped the train and got out to open the switch when I saw the other car coming. I knew there would be a crash, so I jumped back into the train and threw on all the power."

Titled Choreman, 'Broke,' Back With Rich Wife

BOSTON, Oct. 27.—(AP.)—John Fagge, former Pepperell choreman who put aside his lawnmower last February and departed for England to accept an inherited baronetcy, came back today as Sir John Harry Lee Fagge. With him was his wealthy bride, the former Mrs. Florence Cross Murdock, of Marshfield, whom he met on the trip to England.

Sir John admitted he didn't have a dime, but Lady Fagge admitted having many of them, and a comfortable home at Marshfield.

The erstwhile jack-of-all-trades planned to return incognito. However, his idea of traveling third-class while his wife went first-class did not prevail.

Sir John said he fell in love at first sight.

Lady Fagge, however, said seasickness was responsible for their acquaintance. She said Sir John offered to help her when he saw she was ill. They became engaged in March and were married October 15.

GOUT DISABLES HEINZ ARTIST

By PENELOPE REDD,
Art Editor.

Penelope Redd

Surrounded by sheaves of drawings, including fragmentary notes on the details of the two great Heinz "Ship Room" murals, and forgetting the bothersome ailment, Meheut chatted with animation of his colleagues well-known to Pittsburgh.

Meheut is a type of artist frequent in Europe but almost nonexistent in the United States. Relating his career, the versatility of his interests were unfolded. He said:

"As a Breton, the sea was familiar to me as are the fields to inland children. First I drew the strange creatures that the fishermen brought in from the meadows of the sea. Then my interests extended to the forest and to animals.

"When I went to Paris, in 1906, the 'art novean' style of design with floral motifs in delicate, feminine curves was the height of the mode."

Presently, the taste changed and Meheut's virile designs of creatures of sea and wood were sought for every type of decorative art, including ceramics, glass and textiles.

As a collaborator in books, he speedily became famous. Colette, greatest of women writers in France, has done several books for children with him.

All the while he has painted Brittany with a natural spontaneity that few of the French painters from Paris, attain. He has made wood cuts of the countryside about Quimper, on one hand, while on the other he has effected the most sophisticated of mural decorations for exotic Parisian houses.

Halloween Tricks Taboo as Boys Make 'Swap'

CHICAGO, Oct. 27.—(AP.)—There probably won't be many Halloween tricks in the Lawndale district of Chicago this year.

The reason for this is that the boys struck up a bargain with the merchants in the district, trading in all of their time-worn Halloween pranks for "hot dogs," Hamburgers and peanuts.

More than 1,600 boys were represented in this big business deal, which was arranged by a boys' club.

Several leading Democrats were said to have been in the elaborate barroom, and the crowd kept Wilson and his raiders surrounded until the bartenders destroyed most of the evidence.

In a series of raids, Wilson also pounced on the Wilmington Labor Lyceum, seized contraband and arrested several officers.

Wilson was transferred to Delaware several weeks ago, and there was much talk that his activities here brought about the change. This was denied by John D. Pennington, Wilson's chief, and by prohibition officials in Washington.

Heinz Artist Gout Disables

By PENELOPE REDD, Art Editor.

Penelope Redd

Surrounded by sheaves of drawings, including fragmentary notes on the details of the two great Heinz "Ship Room" murals, and forgetting the bothersome ailment, Meheut chatted with animation of his colleagues well-known to Pittsburgh.

Meheut is a type of artist frequent in Europe but almost nonexistent in the United States. Relating his career, the versatility of his interests were unfolded. He said:

"As a Breton, the sea was familiar to me as are the fields to inland children. First I drew the strange creatures that the fishermen brought in from the meadows of the sea. Then my interests extended to the forest and to animals.

"When I went to Paris, in 1906, the 'art novean' style of design with floral motifs in delicate, feminine curves was the height of the mode."

Presently, the taste changed and Meheut's virile designs of creatures of sea and wood were sought for every type of decorative art, including ceramics, glass and textiles.

As a collaborator in books, he speedily became famous. Colette, greatest of women writers in France, has done several books for children with him.

All the while he has painted Brittany with a natural spontaneity that few of the French painters from Paris, attain. He has made wood cuts of the countryside about Quimper, on one hand, while on the other he has effected the most sophisticated of mural decorations for exotic Parisian houses.

Halloween Tricks Taboo as Boys Make 'Swap'

CHICAGO, Oct. 27.—(AP.)—There probably won't be many Halloween tricks in the Lawndale district of Chicago this year.

The reason for this is that the boys struck up a bargain with the merchants in the district, trading in all of their time-worn Halloween pranks for "hot dogs," Hamburgers and peanuts.

More than 1,600 boys were represented in this big business deal, which was arranged by a boys' club.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 26.—(AP.)—George F. Hale, former owner and publisher of the Salt Lake City Telegram, died at his San Francisco home last night after a lingering illness. He was 49.

FLIERS HAILED IN LOS ANGELES

over the city. Down, down, down right into the midst of those glinting diamonds and find ourselves taxi-ing up to a glittering paradise, the Alhambra Airport, where thousands upon thousands are waiting to welcome the first coast-to-coast all flying passengers on a regularly scheduled transcontinental airways plane.

FIVE MAKE TRIP

Only five passengers made the entire flight from New York. They were I. Montague, Beverly Hills movie director; B. F. Mahoney, designer of the Ryan monoplane in which Col. Lindbergh made his flight from New York to Paris; N. S. Nelson, former New York attorney, now retired and living in Los Angeles, and Robert Mills, Paterson, N. J., hardware merchant. Clarence M. Young, assistant secretary for aeronautics, United States Department of Commerce, boarded the ship at Columbus and came on through to the Coast.

The trip over from Kansas City, where we spent last night in a hotel, was most enjoyable, although a trifle bumpy which might have spoiled it in part for several of the less hardy air travelers. Leaving Kansas City at 8:30 in the morning the ship, a 14-passenger Fokker, carried us over the western air express route through Wichita, Kan.; Amarillo, Tex.; Albuquerque, New Mexico, and Winslow and into the mountains back of Los Angeles.

SEE INDIAN FETE

Endless plains, the fertile farm lands spread out beneath us as far as the eye could see, proved more or less monotonous after a while. Interspersed now and then with myriads of oil derricks as we crossed over into a corner of Oklahoma and then down into the Texas panhandle, the farmland panorama was broken now and then, the huge man-carrying bird finally settling down at Amarillo for refueling. Then into the air again, we soared down across the panhandle into New Mexico. The ground beneath breaking up into mesa and buttes in the old Indian country. Across Laguna, one of the oldest Indian settlements in North America, we skimmed, flying so low that the natives, gathered in some sort of tribal festival, were plainly visible to the occupants of the plane.

Beneath us, the desert wastes began rising rapidly to the continental divide which is designated geographically just east of the New Mexico-Arizona line and then into the desert wastes of Arizona. The Painted Desert spread away to the north, the ship passing just over the edge of the petrified forest, and just a little further on we settled down once again in the desert at Winslow.

FINDS TAIL WIND

This was the last stop before Los Angeles. Lamar Nelson, trim youthful pilot of Western Air Express Service, who took the plane form Albuquerque, pointed the ship's nose into a gradual climb, reaching finally a favorable wind at between 14,000 and 15,000 feet.

The ship hummed along merrily in a 70-mile-an-hour tail wind, reaching 150 miles an hour or better, swinging out across the rising peaks of the Sierra mountain ranges, and as we skimmed along, the grim peaks stood out in silhouette against the darkening sky as the sun sank into rosy glory over the Western coast.

Soon it was pitch dark, the mountains inky black against the ground, and all that was visible were the moon and stars and an occasional homesteader's shack blinking feebly.

The passengers, all of them recovered from their mild air-sickness by this time in the steady forward rush of the giant plane, began to amuse themselves by estimating the time of arrival at Los Angeles.

LUNCH SERVED ABOARD

Lunch provided another diversion, the courier serving cold chicken, daintily sliced buttered bread; a tomato salad, celery, an apple and coffee. It hardly seemed any time at all before the lights of San Bernardino came into view and with them came the excitement of anticipated arrival.

Bands played, the spectators cheered. It was the end of the pioneer flight and a new record set up for transcontinental travel through Pittsburgh, the aerial gateway to the West and the industrial center of the world.

DEPICTS SOVIET AS LABORATORY

Russia is the "largest and most interesting social laboratory on our planet just now," and is conducting dangerous experiments, the Rev. Dr. John Ray Ewers said in a sermon in the East End Christian Church yesterday, one of a series on Soviet Russia.

Marriage in Russia is simple, he said, continuing:

"The fee for the ordinary worker is almost nothing, perhaps 75 cents. I saw three couples married by merely signing their names to the register."

Dr. Ewers described ease of divorce, which may be obtained by either husband or wife on application, if there are no children, without financial settlement. Children are protected financially, he said. Divorce occurs in about 26 per cent of marriages, as compared with 16.6 per cent here, he said.

AL SMITH ON AIR TONIGHT

The Loudspeaker

Versatile Voices.
River Songs Best.
A Bow to CBS.

By LOUIS REID

Louis Reid.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—American broadcasters searching the English byways for more voices to conquer have scored their most signal victory. They have snared George Bernard Shaw. The easy chairs have waited long for Shaw. The majority of them have despaired of ever hearing him, so emphatic has been his "No" to the maharajahs. It has been hinted that the radio men have persisted in leaving their wallets at home when they called on him, strange conduct considering Shaw's reputation as a shrewd bargainer. To have gained his approving nod at last would indicate that they have abandoned their custom.

SHAW AT LAST TO TALK TO AMERICA

Rejecting the offers of the lecture bureaus to visit us in person, Shaw can reach our ears without stepping from his chair in the Savoy Hotel. Whatever he chooses as his subject, though it might be the economic policies of the Esquimaux, he is, to our mind, one of the three greatest talking attractions the broadcasters can present.

The other two, it is our urge to tell you, are the Prince of Wales talking about charmers and Wilhelm of Hohenzollern, talking about himself.

Radio advisers on hearth and home are still maintaining that "marriage is a job that wives should work at." Has the unemployment crisis reached the kitchen?

Choral groups continue to air Kreisler's "The Old Refrain." Perhaps, Kreisler would sign on radio's dotted lines were he promised a microphone stilling of "The Old Refrain."

Talkie producers are now beating a path to the doorsteps of radio script writers. The radio pastures are offering today the shortest road to the three-car garage and the private runt golf course.

It is hard to recall that there were once songs in the land called "Standing in the Old Bread Line" and "Since I Took the Keeley Cure." Curses may be hurled at the machine age, but when it thundered upon us it put a stop definitely to such tunes.

Singers under contract to broadcasters are frequently called upon in a single evening to shift from Broadway ballads to arias from "Aida"... We have a higher regard than ever for the World Series broadcasts. Not one syllable of "Casey at the Bat" penetrated the eardrums this fall... In its tracking down of the melody men of the past, radio occasionally lures James Thornton to the microphone. Thornton's most enduring number was "When You Were Sweet Sixteen"... One of the most singable of current ballads is "Rolling Down the River."

RIVER TUNES ARE SONGSHOP STANDBYS

River tunes are the standbys of the songshops, as sure-fire as the "Stars and Stripes" is to a street parade. Were we to engage in the music publishing business we should confine most of our attention to a search for songs of rivers, knowing that once we found them our relations with the banks would be more intimate.

And isn't it time for a song about the Hudson and the Genesee and the Allegheny and the Colorado? They have been strangely neglected in Tin Pan Alley.

Just as the movie magnificoes in their early days were ever fond of declaring that the surface of their industry "had only been scratched," so today when composers, with an eye on the microphones, are asked to commit themselves they invariably state that "radio is doing much to raise the standard of musical taste."

A bow to the Columbia network, my ear-cuppers, for its large aid in raising the standards! The Detroit Symphony, one of the most expert in the land, with Gabrilowitsch conducting, is marching to its microphones to keep company with the Philharmonic and the Minneapolis orchestras.

Radio Maestros are among the most superstitious of people, their individual jinxes taking the form usually of the sadder songs of man. Perhaps, it is just as well, if we can get along with a little less crying in the near-beer.

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN
Radio Editor.

Always searching for the odd, strange and curious to satiate an ever hungry radio public, Frank Black has injected a chorus of Hindu words in "The Chant of the Jungle" for WCAE listeners at 9:30 tonight. Better than that, we think, will be the Brigadiers' singing of "To a Wild Rose" and "To a Water Lily." Elliott Shaw, baritone, is to sing Herbert's "Gypsy Love Song." Al Smith bombards the ether at 8:30 on WJAS. "A Bohemian Mystery" confronts Sherlock Holmes on WCAE at 10. "I'll Be Blue Thinking of You" is the sentiment of Faye Cantrelle, crooner, in the Maytag concert on KDKA at 9.

Darrell V. Martin

Mrs. E. H. Maytag, of Newton, Ia., whose husband is president of the Maytag Company, has a message of interest to housewives in this program.

How to get the effect of chattering teeth over the radio was a mystery to R. P. Griffith, "Gus Schmaltz," until he tried rattling dice before the microphone. It worked. Hear the effect tonight at 6:15, KDKA.

Ted Husing's description of the Pitt-Notre Dame game was splendid. Colorful and animated. Easy to follow.

He's coming back to Pittsburgh next season to announce the Pitt-Army contest.

When he said the Panthers' claws had been clipped he had the right dope.

It took three microphones to cover the game—one for Husing, one for the Pitt bleachers and one for Notre Dame rooters.

* * *

We enjoyed every word of that Tokio gentleman in the Naval treaty broadcast this morning.

AERIAL GAME

The Landt Trio missed a grid contest in Gotham Saturday because they didn't have enough knowledge of the game, Bill White told us this a. m.

"Passes" for the Landt boys were on their way to the studio via a messenger when the courier was met by Bill White.

"Say, here are passes for this afternoon's game. Give them to the Landt boys, will you?" requested the messenger.

Instead, Bill took two girls to the game.

"Well, how do you make out that we missed an opportunity to see the battle because we didn't have enough knowledge of the game?" inquired the Landt boys, a little pacified at last.

"Intercepted your pass," wisecracked Mr. White.

ITALIAN LEAGUE FOR PINCHOT

Announcement was made today from the office of C. C. McGovern, Western Pennsylvania manager for Gifford Pinchot's campaign for governor, that the Italo-American Pinchot League for Western Pennsylvania, had unanimously indorsed Pinchot and the whole Republican ticket.

The officers of the league include Dr. Frank Ferrante, chairman; Charles G. Notari, vice chairman, and Joseph A. Rossi, secretary.

A resolution adopted by the league says the members have considered the offices to be filled and the character and utterances of the candidates, and, while giving due credit to the character and war record of John M. Hemphill, Democratic-Liberal candidate for governor, they say they find him inexperienced and under dominance of a gang of Philadelphia politicians.

The action of the league was viewed as a counter-action against the Italian-American Republican League of Pennsylvania, which recently indorsed Hemphill.

HEMPHILL SEES STATE'S RIGHTS AS BIG ISSUE

Charges Pinchot With Aim To Centralize Power; Scores Dry Measures

(Editor's Note—This is the first of three articles in which the opposing candidates for the governorship of Pennsylvania describe the issues of the campaign. In the accompanying article, Mr. Hemphill presents the issues from the standpoint of the Democratic and Liberal parties. Tomorrow, Mr. Pinchot will describe the issues propounded by the regular Republican ticket. Wednesday, Mr. Maurer will tell what the Socialists propose for the government of Pennsylvania.)

By JOHN M. HEMPHILL,
Democratic and Liberal Party Candidate for Governor.
Written for International News Service.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Oct. 27.—Without belittling any plank in the great Democratic platform, I feel free to state that the campaign has narrowed itself to two principal issues. The first is the right of Americans to local self-government and the second, and possibly greater issue, is the doctrine of state rights as applied to the liquor question.

The government of Pennsylvania has descended from the hands of the people into a dangerous centralization of power at Harrisburg, provoking conditions which free Americans feel intolerable. We oppose this building up of centralized power, with its wastage of red tape and its terrible tax burden on the common people. We feel Gifford Pinchot, who represents that type of government, is the most dangerous autocrat we ever had in Pennsylvania. His latest proposal is to take over 20,000 miles of township roads in order to create a greater centralization of power in his hands.

"RIGHTS USURPED"

More and more the people are being governed, as our platform so truly proclaims, but less and less do they govern themselves. The rights of the state are rapidly being usurped by the federal government; local authority gives way to dictation from Harrisburg and Gifford Pinchot seeks that dictatorship.

The Democracy of Pennsylvania opposes this trend in government and calls upon the people of the state to its support in this battle to maintain both the principle and the practice of state's rights and local self-government.

LIQUOR ISSUE

The second great issue in this election, and it applies equally well to every other state in view of the crisis into which our constitutional democracy has been thrown, is the doctrine of state's rights as applied to regulation of intoxicating liquor. In other words, we propose the elimination of the Eighteenth Amendment and the return to the several states of their constitutional right to manage their own affairs and especially, their police powers. The first step in Pennsylvania is to repeal the vicious Snyder-Armstrong act, which places the individual citizen in double jeopardy, and which was written into the statute books in Mr. Pinchot's administration. As he still defends that law by remaining silent on the question of repeal, the question presents an issue of fundamental importance to the citizens of Pensnylvania.

Pike County Bolter Spoils 'Unanimity'

HARRISBURG, Oct. 27.—(AP.)—Gen. Edward Martin, Republican state chairman, today issued a 17-word statement anent the resignation of Asa Martin as Republican county chairman in Pike County, home of Gifford Pinchot. He said:

"I see Asa Martin has jumped the traces. That means Pike County will not be quite unanimous."

GRUNDY SCORES BOLTERS

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 27.—(AP.)—Senator Joseph R. Grundy has sent an open reply to Kern Dodge, of this city, to a letter sent to Mr. Grundy when Mr. Dodge recently decided to support John M. Hemphill, Democratic-Liberal party candidate for governor.

Senator Grundy, in his letter, declared that "the presidential prospects of the Democratic party" would be enhanced by the election of a Democrat as governor of Pennsylvania, and added:

"Your reference to my Republican regularity as 'camouflage' is offensive and lacking of any justification. I have been regular in my Republicanism all my life."

"And inasmuch as Gifford Pinchot's course in 1914 was not regarded as a serious obstacle to his Republican nomination and Republican election to the governorship in 1922, nor to his Republican nomination again this year, it is partly amusing and partly pathetic to observe the mental and political gymnastics by which you and others attempt to hurdle all that in order to get back to 1914 for an attempted explanation of your support of a Democratic candidate in the approaching election."

MELLON TO GO ON AIR

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—Secretary Mellon and Dwight W. Morrow, former ambassador to Mexico, and Republican candidate for the Senate in New Jersey, are among six of those high in the Republican party who will be heard in national radio hookups before the close of the present campaign.

Secretary Mellon will speak for 20 minutes over the Columbia Broadcasting System Wednesday at 10 p. m. on the subject, "Ambitions of the Hoover Administration." Ambassador Morrow will speak over a nation-wide hookup of the National Broadcasting Company Saturday night.

PINCHOT BACKS IZAAK WALTONS

Both Gifford Pinchot and James J. Davis, Republican nominees for governor and United States senator, are pledged to the legislative and administrative program of the Izaak Walton League on Conservation, it was announced by Dr. William H. Moore, president of the league.

Dr. Moore revealed that neither John M. Hemphill, for governor, nor Sedgwick Kistler, for United States senator, on the Democratic ticket, are so pledged.

Both Hemphill and Kistler suggested action by the Democratic State Committee in its platform, but such action was not taken, and, according to the Moore statement, Hemphill has since refused to commit himself. The questionnaire was sent out early in the year, long before the primaries.

Bullfighter's Ranch Burns, Eight Dead

SEVILLE, Spain, Oct. 27.—(INS.)—Eight persons were burned to death here today when fire destroyed the ranch of the well known Spanish bull fighter, Bombito. Eighty fighting bulls were lost in the blaze.

Mother Shoots Two To Protect Daughter

SOLDIER, Kan., Oct. 27.—(AP.)—Mrs. Edith Thornton, 50, who fired a revolver into the darkness at two men she believed were attacking her daughter, was under investigation today for the slaying of Cecil Critchlow, 26, and the wounding of Sam Curtis, 38.

Mrs. Thornton told officers the two men had beaten her daughter's escort when they found the couple in an automobile in front of the Thornton home Saturday night. Mrs. Thornton said she believed her daughter was being attacked, so she picked up a revolver and fired four times.

HOLLYWOOD AND GOTHAM GOSSIP; NEW DRAMAS TO OPEN TONIGHT

MAURICE CHEVALIER IN BOTH FULTON AND SHERIDAN

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Maurice Chevalier, popular Frenchman, is appearing on both the Fulton and the Sheridan Square screens in a picture, "Playboy of Paris." As drama it is just an ordinary movie farce. But the presence of Chevalier and of the goofy comic, Stuart Erwin, put it over.

Here Chevalier plays a millionaire waiter. He can't quit the tray-lugging business because of a freak contract. So he spends his days at his job and his nights in flying around to the gay spots. He carries an alarm clock with him and whenever its gong announces 6 a. m., he beats it back to the restaurant. Mr. Erwin is seen as his dishwashing pal.

Of course there is a romantic angle. In one corner is Frances Dee, screen newcomer. She's cute and maybe she is an actress. However, her part doesn't afford her much opportunity. In another corner is the blonde Dorothy Christie. She's of the Theda Bara school. But it is the novice, Dee, that gets Maurice at the finale.

Mr. Chevalier sings a song, consumes a lot of wine, goes ice-skating, breaks a lot of dishes and gets challenged to a duel. In fact, he dominates the whole picture. Too bad it isn't a better picture to dominate.

Sails the Sea

NEW PLAYS TO OPEN IN LOCAL THEATERS TONIGHT

Katharine Cornell comes to the Alvin tonight in her play, "Dishonored Lady." Miss Cornell is remembered for her success in "The Green Hat," "The Letter," "The Age of Innocence" and other hits.

Norma Terris and Howard March head the cast of the new comic operetta, "The Wall of Romance," opening tonight in the Nixon.

The George Sharp Players in the Pitt begin an engagement in "That Ferguson Family," tonight. The play has to do with a mother and father, three children and their various sweethearts.

Capt. Menke will present "St. Elmo" on his Golden Rod Showboat at Montrose for one week, beginning tonight. This will mark the fifteenth and final week of the boat's engagement at the Montrose Hotel Landing on the Allegheny River, just above Aspinwall.

New M. C. Features Club Mirador Show

William Snyder, direct from Hollywood, is the new master of ceremonies in the Club Mirador, Homestead. Other entertainers in the floor revue include Rosemarie Stewart, blues singer; Gypsy Barnes and Billie Gerber, dancers; Dunn Brothers, comedians, and Bertha Muller, specialty dancer. Mr. Sherman And Ex-Wife Not in Same Film After All

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1930, Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 27.

Emil Chautard, and not Lowell Sherman, will play the leading masculine role in the French version of "The Queen's Husband," soon to be produced by Radio Pictures.

Which spoils a swell story published in this column recently—that Sherman would play the part with his former wife, Pauline Garon, in the principal feminine role.

Mary Astor

It develops that Sherman has nothing to do with the French version. "The Queen's Husband" is being made in English with Sherman, Mary Astor and Nance O'Neill in the principal roles.

The same picture is being produced in French, directed by the Marquis Henry De La Falaise, with Chautard, Pauline Garch and Francoise Rosay in the principal roles.

Incidentally, Radio Pictures executives vigorously deny that they are "getting a private kick out of casting Sherman and Miss Garon as man and wife," the reasons being two: (A). Because they are not playing in the same picture, and (B), because even if they were playing in the same picture, they would play father and daughter, not husband and wife.

Hard, cold logic that.

A NEW PROPHET

As Benny Rubin sagely observes, "If you give a woman enough rope, she'll skip."

THE GRAUMAN TOUCH

Sid Grauman, the old maestro of gala premieres, is hopefully watching two oil-wells in the new Venice field. He plans a typical Hollywood premiere, stars and all, when they come in.

WE'RE WAITING

Is every doctor's wife a common enemy of every doctor's female patients?

Fox will take a stab at answering this in a talkie version of the novel, "Doctors' Wives," by Henry and Sylvia Lieferant.

This sophisticated theme will be directed by Frank Borzage, a new departure for one of Hollywood's masters of sentiment. Borzage also is to be intrusted with the delicate task of bringing "Young Sinners" to the screen. Production of the Elmer Harris comedy has been postponed for the nonce.

In the past year Borzage has contributed three pictures: Will Rogers' "They Had to See Paris," John McCormack's "Song o' My Heart" and Fereno Molnar's "Liliom."

MARY STUDIES FRENCH

I NOTE THAT Douglas Fairbanks is studying jui-juitsui under two Japanese instructors. Mary Pickford is to speak with a French accent after all in "Kiki." She is learning how from Yola D'Avril. Dolores Del Rio is selling her home, which boasts one of the grandest oak trees in this part of the country. Legend has it that seven men were strung from its hugs limbs by the Vigilantes of years ago. Thelma Todd, who's a Boston miss, has received a pot of Boston-baked beans through the mails, compliments of a hotel in her home town. Roland West, the arbiter of Chester Morris' destiny, has turned down 20 offers for his protege.

Douglas Fairbanks

Some of the studios are a little timid about paying the $75,000 that Chester gets for a picture.

MORE OF LEW

Lew Cody, most amiable of boulevardiers, continues to talk his way back to screen popularity.

He'll be seen in "Band Rush," the new Fox version of "Three Bad Men." Eddie Gribbon also has been added to the cast.

A friend of J. Farrell MacDonald reproaches me that I failed to mention the character actor as on of the original cast of this film. Sorry.

The Musical Society of the Young Men and Women's Hebrew Association presented Erika Morini, violinist, in the opening concert of its brilliant series last night. The soloist generously repaid the large audience for its cordial reception, and one felt that there was satisfaction on both sides of the footlights.

Morini played here many years ago when she was seeking honors. She has earned them with great diligence in the meantime, and now comes to us an artist to rank among the chosen. The peasant-like virility of her early playing has not vanished from her bow, and she hews phrases with the same rugged strokes as Rodin cut his marble. Her music is as elastic and graceful as a human voice, it is still imbued with youth in spite of its finished style. Her tone flows luxuriantly from a volcanic temperament.

It was a popular program and suffered decidedly when Morini substituted the concerto for a Beethoven Sonata. The Gluck air is more beautiful as flute solo, but to hear any music of Couperin is an innovation indeed. The Brahms Waltz in quick tempo is questionable. Paul Juon, a contemporary writer, of whom we hear too little, wrote a commendable Lullaby and the player found its true spirit. The Paganini Fantasia brought forth viola-like tones that were most agreeable.

Theodore Saidenberg played repressed accompaniments. As encores, Chaminade's "Serenade Espagnole" and an arrangement of the "Londonderry Air" said nothing new.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

Center Avenue 'Y' In Member Drive

The membership committee of the Center avenue branch of the Y. M. C. A., headed by Attorney W. H. Stanton, has opened a drive for 500 new members. Stanton announced the Pittsburgh Trust Company started the drive by giving all its Negro employes membership cards. Two groups of workers will compete in the campaign for the supremacy in getting members.

CIRCUS LIFE, ETERNAL TRIANGLE IN NEW HARRIS FILM

"Swing High," a musical film of circus days, is current in the Harris. It shows that the movie-makers haven't forgotten Emil Jannings' "Variety." It puts in the trapeze stunt and has that green-eyed monster, Jealousy, swinging high in the air. Only this time it is two women after one man and not two men after one woman.

Helen Twelvetrees, Fred Scott and Dorothy Burgess impersonate the eternal triangle. But there are numerous others in the cast, including John Sheehan, Daphne Pollard, George Fawcett, Bryant Washburn, Nick Stuart, Sally Starr, Ben Turpin, Chester Conklin, Stepin Fetchit and Robert Edeson. Some of these, however, only are seen in brief flashes.

The film story has an Horatio Alger touch. Our hero is accused of stealing the circus owners' money. But he's a good boy and he didn't do it. So comes a climax that proves his innocence and brings the fadeout clinch.

Things I Never Knew Till Now

That last year in the United States of America more people died from overwork than from all the loafing put together.

That Navajo men are not allowed to look at their ma-in-laws.

That not all the $2 bills are legal tender for the payment of import duties or any other taxes. Which accounts for the superstitious spurning all $2 bills as "hard luck."

That when you get drunkee in Britain you get "woofled."

That a half hour after a grebe chick is born, it can swim and dive. Your kids cannot do that—so get y'self a smaller hat!

That an eagle can fly 80 miles an hour. The best man can do is run 100 yards in 9⅕ seconds. Or do you prefer spicy jokes?

That the Beaux Arts was the first restaurant here to allow women to smoke in public. Bernhardt used to breakfast there with beer!

That a swelegant way to clean playing cards is to sprinkle talcum powder on 'em, and then rub with a dry, soft cloth.

That in 1659 in Massachusetts if you observed Christmas Day as a holiday you were fined $1.25, by golly!

That the match was invented 102 years ago, you dopes!

That Beatrice was nine years of age when Dante first saw her and fell in love with her; she wedded another and died at 24.

That Sterne, who was known to weep at the mere perusal of pathetic suffering, deserted his own wife and children.

That Balzac said, "of all secret things love is the most public."

That in the time of Frederick the Great's father it was dangerous for a man to be six feet tall. Because they had to be soldiers.

That the great Captain Zisca wished a drum to be made of his skin after he was dead, because he thought the very noise of it would put his enemies to flight. He was idioscyncrazy.

That a legend states Victor Hugo wrote his stuff standing.

That Aristotle was something of a dandy; his hair had a jaunty cut, and he featured numerous rings on his fingers.

That the shortest distance from coast to coast is between San Diego, Cal., and Charleston, S. C.—2,152 miles.

That pearls are placed in the swords of Hindu warriors to denote the tears of their enemies. (And I'm supposed to be insane).

That Gladstone always chewed his food thirty-two times.

That the actor Cooper had a strange propensity for betting. Once, seeing on Broadway a cart loaded with hay, he made a wager with a friend, staking the possible proceeds of his benefit performance, that he would draw a longer wisp than his companion would. He lost $1,200.

That ants can easily carry twice their own weight.

That it is impossible to split an infinitive in French.

That Landor, once in a towering passion, threw his cook out the window, and then exclaimed, as he saw his victim strike the ground: "Good God! I never thought of those poor violets!"

That the first oil well in the U. S. was at Titusville, Pa.; it produced about 400 gallons a day, starting on Aug. 28, 1859.

The Voltaire had one hundred and eighty pseudonyms.

That common brick is red because there is iron in the clay.

That Sophocles killed himself because one of his plays was hissed off the stage. Nowadays authors even matters by writing another.

That the Associated Press on Oct. 23 scooped the town with the discovery that McClelland Barclay, the artist, "secretly" married his model, Marie Haskins, in Maine on October 11. No less a relative than the bride's mother announced their marriage date on October 11!!

That Goethe was annoyed by the sight of specs on anyone.

Farnsworth's Son Linked In Maid's Confession

CHAPTER LV

"WIDOW CLEARED IN FARNSWORTH MURDER

"Demented Maid Kills Self After Penning Confession to Slaying Rich Man

"Catherine Farnsworth, pretty young widow convicted last Tuesday of the murder of her millionaire husband, today stands innocent of the crime.

"A demented housemaid, Marguerite Spinney, now a suicide, was the real murderer of Alfred E. Farnsworth.

"This sensational development in a case that has already attracted national interest, came with the simultaneous finding of the Spinney woman's body and the confession she had written before taking a fatal overdose of opium.

"Credit for the dramatic vindication of Mrs. Farnsworth, in the face of her conviction in Judge East's court, is freely given to her own attorneys, Jesse P. Allen and Henry A. Gunther.

"In refusing to accept the apparently inevitabe, they sought desperately for a way out of the tangled mess of circumstantial evidence that enmeshed their pretty client. They chose as a weak point in the prosecution's case the disappearance of Marguerite Spinney, held at the beginning of the trial as a material witness for the state.

"It was the Spinney woman who was in the house with Mrs. Farnsworth on the night of the murder.

"The attorneys for the defense were certain that a rigid cross-examination of this woman would bring out facts vital to the case, and the correctness of their surmise is seen now in the virtual admission of District Attorney Robert Macmillan that the new evidence clears Mrs. Farnsworth.

New Trial Necessary

"The confession of Marguerite Spinney is now in the hands of the district attorney. It is a long, painfully written document whose details dovetail perfectly in clearing up hitherto mysterious elements in the case. In the opinion of the prosecution, the confession will necessitate setting aside the jury's verdict and granting Mrs. Farnsworth a new trial. This, however, promises to be a mere formality, and the case will probably be dismissed on motion of the district attorney.

"The finding of Marguerite Spinney and the contents of her confession form a strange chapter in criminal history.

"It was not until late last night that Mrs. Farnsworth's attorneys, working desperately, finally succeeded in finding the missing housemaid in a tenement lodging house in Stockton street, near Chinatown.

"Convinced that they had found her hiding place, and accompanied by Officers Jenks and Burgess, of the northern police station, they rapped on the door. After repeated raps had elicited no response, the officers broke down the door.

"They found the body of Marguerite Spinney, dressed all in white, lying on the bed. Her long, dark red hair streamed over the pillow and she appeared at first to be sleeping.

"Coroner Webster estimates that she had been dead about seven hours.

"It is believed that the woman was not a dope addict, and that the opium which caused her death was procured with suicidal intent.

Chester Faces Prosecution

"In her confession, found by her side, the dead woman revealed the long, sordid story of her relations with the Farnsworth family. The murder was the result of a lifetime grudge against the men of the family. It is revealed also in the confession that the maid intended to kill Chester T. Farnsworth, her victim's son. Grieving because her act had resulted in the unexpected arrest and conviction of her beloved mistress, the half-mad woman decided to confess and commit suicide as the best way out of the situation.

"Police learned that the Spinney woman had occupied housekeeping rooms in the Stockton street tenement for several weeks. Mrs. C. Pinochi, who leases the building, states that she rented the room to the Spinney woman, who paid a month in advance. She was a quiet and unobtrusive roomer, claimed to be in poor health, and rarely left the room. Her only visitor was a stout, elderly Italian woman whose identity has not as yet been established.

"Police are working to clear up several obscure angles of the case including the source from which the Spinney woman procured the opium."

FARNSWORTH'S SON LINKED IN MURDERER'S CONFESSION

"The amazing confession that has cleared Mrs. Catherine Farnsworth of all suspicion in the murder of her millionaire husband, involves Chester T. Farnsworth, rich young clubman and son of the murdered man, in what may be serious charges.

"Following are the latest developments in the case:

"1. Chester T. Farnsworth is revealed in the confession as the father of an illegitimate child born to Marguerite Spinney, suicide and self-confessed murderess.

"2. The district attorney promises that the full confession of the Spinney woman will be made public tomorrow.

"3. Coincident with the expected dismissal of the case against Mrs. Catherine Farnsworth, it was intimated today that charges of perjury will be filed against Chester T. Farnsworth in connection with his testimony in the trial.

"4. V. J. Althouse and Wilbur Burns, who corroborated Farnsworth's testimony against Mrs. Catherine Farnsworth, may also face perjury charges.

"5. Allen and Gunther, attorneys for Mrs. Farnsworth have traced the full connection of the Spinney woman with the Farnsworth family, revealing a startling story of love, envy, jealousy and hate extending over two generations.

Mother Housekeeper

"The mother of Marguerite Spinney, a widow known as Maggie Spinney, was for seven years a housekeeper for the late Horace Farnsworth, who died in 1915. The woman, Maggie Spinney, came into his employ shortly after the death of his wife, Hannah, in 1888. She was dismissed in 1895 for misconduct with an Oscar Leeds, butler in the house. Leeds, who had several aliases, disappeared at the same time, and probably left the vicinity for good.

"Brooding over her dismissal and disgrace, the Spinney woman seems to have rapidly lost her mind. She attributed all her misfortune to her late employer and at first bitterly accused him of having turned her lover, Leeds, against her. Later she seems to have changed her story and accused Horace Farnsworth of the paternity of her daughter Marguerite, who was born that same year. She made several half-hearted attempts to blackmail the aged millionaire, and on the 28th of May, 1896, he swore out a warrant against her. She withdrew her charges, and the case was dropped.

"She died on June 2, 1902, when the daughter, Marguerite, was 7. Tuberculosis is recorded as the cause of death, though starvation was hinted at by neighbors. She never worked after leaving the Farnsworth house and her small savings rapidly dwindled. Towards the last, she and the child Marguerite, lived in almost unbelievable squalor and poverty.

Mental Weakness

"A few days before her death she sent the child Marguerite to the Farnsworth house, with a note to the wife of Horace Farnsworth's son, Alfred, then mistress of the house. The note, which was found with papers on file in the late Alfred Farnsworth's safe, declared that she was the daughter of Horace Farnsworth, and pleaded for her care during her lifetime.

Mrs. Alice Farnsworth, famous for her philanthropy, active in the founding of rescue homes and free hospital beds for children, took the child into the home, although no credence was ever placed in her story. Her determination to keep her resulted in many bitter family quarrels as Alfred Farnsworth was bitterly opposed to her stand.

"Part of her childhood Marguerite spent in a hospital for the tubercular at Alice Farnsworth's expense. She regained her health but showed from earliest childhood evidence of mental weakness.

"The love affair between her and the late Alfred Farnsworth's child, Chester, developed after Alice Farnsworth's death, when Marguerite was about 24 and the Farnsworth boy 18. Alfred Farnsworth immediately sent Chester to a school in the east. Marguerite's active hatred of him seems to have began at that time.

"On Chester's return from school the affair was resumed, culminating in the birth of a child to Marguerite, in Marysville, California. It was left in the care of a couple named Scudding, residents of Marysville, and died within a few months. Marguerite kept the knowledge of his death from Chester, and exacted payments from him over a period of years. All knowledge of the child was kept from Alfred Farnsworth who to the day of his death believed his son innocent of any relationship with the maid and let her feel his disgust at what he frequently called her brazen behavior and attempt to ensnare his son.

"Many of these facts were brought out at the trial, but flatly denied by Chester Farnsworth.

"Sentence on Catherine Farnsworth was to have been passed in a few days."

Fay King Confesses a Weakness for Bracelets, Beads, Earrings and Doo Dabs

I LIKE TO SEE FRILLS, AND I WEAR THEM WHETHER THEY ARE IN STYLE OR NOT

CLANG! CLANG!

FAY-KING

By FAY KING

If there is anything hereditary in tastes, then one of my ancestors must have been a handcuff king.

I do love bracelets. The cheap kind that jingle like little bells. And I dote on beads—bushels of them.

I wouldn't trade the contents of my card board "jewel" box for any safe deposit vault filled with priceless gems of great worth—and sorry.

Frills are another weakness of mine. I wear them whether they are in style or not.

I like earrings, too. And have quite a lot of them, but the ones I wear are small gold hoops which belonged to my grandmother.

I like great, long, dangling earrings on tall girls, but I am too short to wear them.

Tell It to Sally

By SALLY MARTIN

You Can't Expect Love to Come to You If You Have Nothing to Offer!

Remember "Just David?"

He was the Big, Bright Boob who, because two young ladies had failed to appreciate his charms, decided that all women were tramps and love a lot of hooey.

"No woman is capable of love!" he snorted, giving us the icy glare. "They don't even know what it is! And what is it? A joke . . . that's what! The biggest joke on earth! Women are all selfish and self-centered. And they will hand you a dirty deal, every time!"

We printed his blat—with our fingers crossed. Then we waited for the cyclone. And here it is . . . with Cynthia broadcasting.

Need a tonic? Then get in on it. It's good.

"Dear Sally:

"So 'Just David' thinks that love is a lot of bunk, does he?"

"Well, I want to tell him and the world that he is the original pain in the neck . . . and I don't mean maybe. He has been fooled by two women, has he? And therefore he condemns the whole bunch of us? Well, well, what a Bright Boy he is! It takes a little sprout like him to sputter at the mouth, and attempt to tell the world how rotten women are. It really burns me up in a big way.

"How about the men, thousands and thousands of them, who have handed women a dirty deal? Anybody dumb enough to try to condemn half of humanity, because two . . . count 'em . . . . two . . . of that half handed him the razzberry, should be fooled by women, or anybody else that can do it. And more power to the next woman who does it!

"Oh, yes, David darling, there will be another, because the so-called 'wisest' of us do fall.

"I have been disappointed in men four times now, and I am also young. Just 19. But am I running around telling any sap who will listen to me that men are bums and love a lot of horseradish?

"I am not!

"And neither is anyone else with sense. Probably David's mishap came about because he used bum judgment in picking 'em . . . or because there's something wrong with his technique. Of course he may say that I'm just a young sport, but I believe I know just as much about life as he does, the big sap!

"I have traveled, and I have been in all sorts of homes, beautiful ones and poor ones . . . and I have found it the same everywhere.

"Love is not a path of roses, by any means. As any fool can see. But I fear, sonny boy, that that is what you must have expected it to be. You probably expected the girls to do all the admiring and giving. You expected them to drop all their pet hobbies and whims and praise you and thank you for letting 'em admire yours. No wonder they walked out on you!

"Sure, girls smoke and drink. Some of them too much. But you must show me a man who is a saint—and I'll guarantee that he is a dead one! Since when have men sprouted wings and started playing on golden harps?

"Love makes the world go around, and without love, life would be an empty void. But love won't come to people who don't believe in it. . . or who want to hog all the benefits of it if it should happen to them.

"When Miss Martin told you to wait until you were dry behind the ears before you began to kid yourself that you knew so much, she said a mouthful.

"Of course, love calls for a great deal of sacrifice, and sometimes a lot of hardship. But would it be love . . . or would it be worth having, if it didn't cost us something? We don't get anything for nothing in this world, but you seem to think that you should. Snap out of it! Wake up. Look yourself over . . . and if you have good eyesight, you'll probably see just why these gals gave you the go-by after getting a good look at you. Maybe you admire yourself and your own ideas so much that they thought they were superfluous. But you can bet your bottom dollar that it was something about you that failed to click with them. Think it over!

"And I hope God helps you out of this stupid void you are wandering around in now. You certainly need help!

"CYNTHIA."

A wise, brave letter. And one that looks life square in the face without dodging or whining!

For love will never come to either a man or a woman unless that man or that woman has something to offer love . . . unless they are willing to give, as well as to grab.

THE BEAUTY BOX

By HELEN FOLLETT

Peroxide, combined with powdered pumice stone, will form a paste that can be used with the orange-wood stick to lift the tight cuticle away from the nail base. The mixture is also an excellent cleansing agent to be shoved under the nail cave when grime has lodged there and refuses to get out.

Bath salts and sweet perfumes are delightful luxuries. A woman has a feeling of splendor when she touches her ear lobes with a delicate odor or dabs a bit of the precious fluid upon her handkerchief. Better by far to buy one ounce of a delicate flower fragrance than to invest in a large sized bottle that knocks the passerby on the nose.

Dust is a menace and an enemy. It is particularly dangerous in dark rooms where sunlight never penetrates. The housewife when dusting the furniture must be careful to keep her hair covered, her hands protected and her lungs free of contamination by atmospheric filth. The oiled dust cloth is better than the dry one, which all too often flicks dust from one spot to another.

It isn't true that the only beautiful hands are those of perfect form with long, tapering fingers. There is beauty in useful hands, those that attend the sick and comfort little children. The hands of the surgeon are as interesting as those of the artist. The trouble with the ideally beautiful hands with perfect shell-pink fingernails is that, all too often, they are selfish, lazy hands, never useful, never helpful.

How the nose behaves has a good deal to do with the color and texture of the complexion. If it has a good flue, taking in plenty of air, having no obstructions, it is an accelerator of the blood streams and good circulation means a better digestion, bright, glowing color in the cheeks, sparklers in the little lamps, buoyancy in the step. It is seldom one finds a woman who is satisfied with her nose. She overlooks the fact that it serves noble purposes, even if it is not particularly decorative.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Sees Charles Owen With Marion

I did not permit the problem of Robert Savarin's legacy to accompany me on my Christmas shopping trip for my mother-in-law. With a firm mental gesture I shut it in the taxicab as the driver closed the door after bringing me to the big shop to which I had directed him. There was nothing I could possibly do, I knew, until I heard from Mrs. Cosgrove, and I had my work cut out for me in this afternoon and the next day—all the time I could spare for Christmas shopping. I not only had to purchase all the items on Mother Graham's list, camouflaging the price of each item with a judicious addition from my purse and Dicky's, but I had my last-minute gifts of my own to purchase, chiefly for the basement playroom which the Ticers were constructing as a Christmas surprise to Junior and his cousins.

I tossed up a mental penny before selecting my first counter. Should I buy Mother Graham's things first, or should I attend to my own errands? But I did not wait for the fall of the coin. Too well I knew that no matter what else I accomplished or failed to do, I must not return to the farm with any commission of my mother-in-law's unfinished. The only concession I could make to my own errands was to keep my eyes open at each counter to see if perchance I might see something which I could check off my own last-minute list.

The store was crowded, but I found a comparatively free backwater near a stairway, and taking out Mother Graham's list, ran over it to see that I had it memorized. Then I went in search of the floor man. When I finally was successful in finding one, I marshaled for immediate use the locations of the sections which contained the articles I had to select for my captious mother-in-law.

Then with my invariable wish to get the most disagreeable task out of my way first, I made my way to the apron counter, to select the gift which Mother Grahm had put down for Katie.

"Two serviceable aprons of good material, no nonsense," my mother-in-law had written, and I breathed my annual little moan of protest. For never, in all the years that I have done her Christmas shopping, has she changed from this biennial routine. One year she gives Katie three pair of serviceable lisle hose, the next year two aprons. It matters no whit to her that Katie turns up her nose at anything but silk stockings and either locks the stockings in her trunk or surreptitiously gives them away to some countrywoman less fond of American styles. Nor does she appear to notice the fact that Katie never wears the severe looking aprons which always have been my mother-in-law's unyielding choice despite my protests. In her day, gingham aprons and cotton or lisle stockings were appropriate gifts for housemaids, and she refuses to consider anything else.

"Kitchen aprons, please," I therefore said despondently to one of the saleswomen behind the counter, and then blinked at the riot of color which she flashed before me. I make all of my own aprons, and the previous year had been stocking year for Katie, so I had made no purchases in this department for two years. There had been attractive aprons then, but with Mother Graham's admonition before me, I had turned away from them to the plainer ones. But today I saw nothing which subscribed at all to her strictures.

"Have you anything plainer?" I asked, miserably conscious of the restrained but distinctly contemptuous astonishment of the saleswoman.

"Nothing plainer than these," she answered in a tone which consigned the garment she was holding to the lowest depths of utilitarianism. "The real fancy ones are over on the third counter from here."

An unholy joy welled up in my conscieousness. I could truthfully say to Mother Graham that I had bought the plainest, most serviceable aprons in the shop.

"Give me those two," I directed, and the saleswoman laid aside two gayly colorful aprons which I knew would delight Katie as much as they would irritate my mother-in-law.

But I was not satisfied. Always I have hated "useful" Christmas presents. To me it is a day for giving and receiving pretty things whether cheap or expensive, but which are outside of the ordinary routine of living. For instance, I would rather have a single rose, than the money for a new hat.

It was this thought which sent me to a neighboring counter where was displayed some of the fascinating imitation jewels. But I had not reached it when I heard voices behind me which halted me as if they had been rifle bullets.

"Look, Uncle Charlie!" two girlish voices said in unison, and I wheeled to see Lillian's young daughter, Marion, with her "roomie," Carolyn Brixton, looking enthusiastically up at Charles Owens!

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Tuesday, October 28

The lunar transits bearing rule on this day point to many conflicting and disappointing events and circumstances. There is a menace of loss through litigation, speculation, bad contracts and unwise use of moneys in many directions. Beware of false repute, treachery, misunderstandings and sign all writings with extreme precaution.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year calling for excellent judgment, wise counsel and extreme personal precaution, as there is a menace of unfavorable litigation, loss through bad contracts, fraud and duplicity. Sign all writings cautiously and refrain from law and speculation.

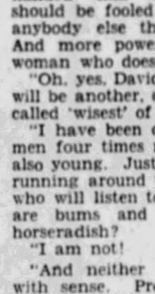
A child born on this day may incline to speculation, chance and extravagant indulgence, thereby squandering its substance and possibly inviting litigation and misunderstandings.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Never Regard an Ear Disturbance Lightly

Behind each ear can be felt a bony protuberence. This is the so-called mastoid bone. Its interior consists of numberless spaces or cells, not unlike the cells in the honeycomb. The largest of these spaces is known as the "mastoid antrum" which opens into the middle ear.



DR. COPELAND

When a person is in normal health the mastoid cells never give trouble. But they are so located that when any infection enters, and their membrane lining becomes inflamed, the trouble may be considered serious, when such an inflammation takes place it is known as "mastoiditis."

Not only does the mastoid antrum communicate with the middle ear, but in its turn the middle ear communicates with the nose through the "Eustachian tube." This is the passageway between the nose and the ear.

There is a continuous membranous lining running through all of these cavities. That is why an infection in the nose, from a cold or influenza, may find its way to the ear. In consequence, there may be inflammation of the middle ear and mastoid cavities.

At first there are the symptoms of a cold. The nose may run, the ears feel "stopped up," and there are occasional twinges of pain in one ear. A gathering may form in the ear, and in a day or two this breaks, permitting a fluid to discharge, usually the pain ends here and the discharge and inflammation soon disappear.

There are other cases, however, that are more serious. The symptoms grow worse and the skin over the prominence behind the ear grows red. The swelling increases until the ear is pushed forward. The patient has fever, restlessness, and may be delirious.

Between the mastoid cells and the cavity of the skull is a layer of bone, no thicker than half a dozen sheets of paper. This thinness of bone offers rather slight protection to the brain, which is situated just within the skull. In the adult it is easier for the pus to burrow through this bony wall into the brain that it is to escape outwardly into the soft tissue behind the ear.

When pus forms here it becomes necessary to perform an operation to permit drainage. The pus must be removed or serious trouble follows.

Very often mastoiditis results from some infection as the result of swimming in polluted waters. Recent press notices tell of swimmers in the waters surrounding one of our great cities, who are sufferers from mastoiditis caused by infection from these dangerously polluted waters.

Such bathing is a very common cause of this disease. It points a lesson to everybody never to go into waters anywhere that are not known to be pure.

A common cold or a case of influenza, no matter how mild, should not be neglected. Give yourself such considerate treatment that the trouble may disappear quickly. If a cold hangs on see a doctor. Do not neglect earache. You cannot regard it lightly. It should be attended to at once.

Elaine And Her Ideas From Paris

Just like the fairy Princess of the night is she — with her slippers solidly embroidered in black paillettes!
Two loose ends of a graceful scarf — vivid green for the color, and a strass of emerald buckle. These and unusually handled pleats made this evening gown from Redfern.

Now her lighter sports silken tassle!

Household Hints

Drop a half of a whole walnut into boiling cabbage and there will be no odor while the cabbage is cooking.

A tablespoon of vinegar, added to each pint of water in which beets are boiled, will preserve their color.

Fresh stains in clothes are easier to remove than old stains.

Paste white oil cloths over the tops of your stationary tubs and you will be surprised how much more attractive your laundry will be.

Gingerbread is nicer if the batter is not beaten. You break it, you know, instead of slicing it, though I must admit it tastes marvelous either way.

Save soap scraps, put them through a food chopper and use for soap chips.

Correct Manners

Expressions to Be Avoided

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

In your column recently you advised Dorothy that it is poor taste to use the expression "steady company," also that it is poor taste to use "likewise" to an acknowledgement of an introduction. I have always used those expressions, thinking they were correct, and because "likewise" was short. Is there any other word that could be used?

F. H.

I am glad that you have turned your eyes and thoughts on the question of the good usage and good form of these expressions. Please don't use them, for if you do, you will be stamped at once, by people who are discriminating, as not knowing what's what in the world of good usage. "Steady company" is a ridiculous expression, never to be used. A man whom you know is either an acquaintance, a friend, or a fiance. "Steady company" is a meaningless expression, to be avoided as you would avoid smallpox.

"Likewise," too, as the form of acknowledgment of an introtion, is equally bad repute. When you acknowledge an introduction, you say, "How do you do?"—and, if you say this, you will always be in good form. When you leave, you may, if you wish, say, "I am very glad to have met you," or something similar—if you are glad.

Bridal Party Attire

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Would it be proper for the maid of honor to wear an evening dress if the bride is married in a dark brown traveling suit? The wedding is to take place at 5 o'clock, at home.

Reader.

This would be in very bad taste, because it would be thoroughly inappropriate. The maid of honor, invariably, should wear a costume of the same type, the same degree of formality or informality, as that worn by the bride. If the bride is to wear a traveling suit, the maid of honor wears an informal suit, too, with a hat, since the bride will undoubtedly wear a hat.

NEW IDEA SAVES SILK HOSE

Did you ever realize that it is the oily excretion of the sebaceous glands and rubbing that keep you buying silk hose and lingerie so often? This oil film that next-to-skin garments absorb is destructive to silks, because it softens and rots the fibre. Soap and water alone will not cleanse it out. Only a solvent like Energine cuts it. Add a tablespoonful of Energine to a quart of lukewarm soapy water. Wash thoroughly, rinse well. Note the new cleanliness—the pleasing freshness—see how original color is revived. And all this with far less rubbing. You'll be amazed at difference in results from washing in just soap and water, and your silken hose and undergarments will last longer. And don't forget millions use Energine daily for quick removal of dirt and grease spots from suits, hats, dresses, gloves, shoes. Large can 35c. Get Energine today.

The Man Pays!

A sweet, unsophisticated young man cannot be too careful with whom he permits himself to go driving these days.

The blonde cutie with the baby stare who smiles back at him when he drives up to the curb in his snappy roadster

may be what is known in the best police circles as a "street siren." That's a lady gangster in flirt's clothing. And her object is NOT matrimony, but banditry or blackmail.

Isn't it WONDERFUL how things have changed!

Once it was the trusting young girl who had to be warned against the big, bad, bold automobile flirt. Once the unsuspecting young thing who accepted a "lift" in a man's car often had to wear down a perfectly good pair of French heels "walking back home."

* * *

Now, if the latest police reports are true, it's the innocent man who lets a girl flag him that pays and pays and PAYS! It is HE who gives up ALL, including his watch and his pearl stickpin, when she lures him out to a lonely spot and whips her little revolver out of her jeweled vanity case.

* * *

That's a modern girl for you! All for herself!

A man may be as pure as a face cream and as harmless as a popular hair dye, but when an unscrupulous woman gets him in her power all his pleadings will not avail him. He must "pay the price"—even if it's his last 39 cents! If not—bang, bang! And he's just another notch in her pearl-handled six-shooter.

* * *

You SEE how it is! Women are apt pupils. And now that they have gone in for all the masculine arts and professions in a Big Way, they have taken over banditry and a lot of other sidelines of industry.

Progress, freedom and self-expression! That's what women wanted. A man's rights, a man's privileges—and most of his pocket money. Fair enough—for the fair sex!

In those quaint old days when the heroine of a popular melodrama delivered her famous speech, "Sex against sex!" she probably never suspected what it would lead to.

Sex was NOT against sex in those days. Men were still under the impression that this was "a man's world," that they were masters of the house and had a first mortgage on most of the popular sins.

They were struggling feebly against "the bloomer girl" and the feminists and were still slightly bewildered as to what it was all about. They did all the luring, all the deceiving and most of the shooting.

WOMEN IDENTIFY YOUTHFUL GUNMAN

SIDEWALKS —of— PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

Katherine Cornell is in town and her press agent, Charlie McClintock, a Pittsburgh boy, who made good in the city and the country, already has been here. Heretofore, Charlie McClintock has been remembered as the bat boy of the Pirates in the days of Expo Park, but since then he has risen—or fallen—to the estate of a publicity man.

William Pfarr

Charlie told us about a rehearsal of Miss Cornell's play, "Dishonored Lady," when they were breaking in a new male lead. The director was Guthrie McClintic, Miss Cornell's husband.

In the action of the play the male lead must wallop Miss Cornell a resounding smack on the cheek. During the rehearsal the new lead tried time and again to put over the wallop with gusto, but Director McClintic was dissatisfied, although his wife's cheek was none the better.

Finally Miss Cornell suggested, "Guthrie, why don't you show him how to do it?"

Guthrie hopped over the lights, onto the stage, and whacked his better half such a successful whack that she was ungracefully toppled off her pins.

"You see," said Miss Cornell to her new lead as she picked herself up, "that's the way to do it. Thank you, Guthrie."

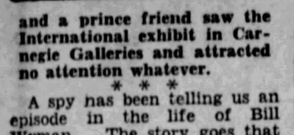
If there are patches torn from the hairy head of one, William Shulgold, painter, today, you may wonder and never know why. For of all those with worries, of all the writers who had to give a play by play account of the Notre Dame-Pitt game, none faced the difficulties of this Pittsburgh artist.



Giovanni Romagnoli, famous Italian artist, was Shulgold's guest at the game. It was the Italian's first adventure into American football. With only a dictionary knowledge of French and English, Romagnoli listened patiently, skeptically, interestedly. Shulgold is now planning to take up Italian, and Romagnoli still isn't sure what a punt is.

Helen Clay Frick, daughter of the late Henry Clay Frick, dropped into town to see International Art Exhibit. Her scientific brother, Childs Frick, and his wife spent half a day walking through six miles of Frick Woods trails—a park and trails made possible by his late father's generosity. Friends of Miss Frick say that, although she spends most of her time away from Pittsburgh, if anyone mentions that this is not her home "it means fight."

and a prince friend saw the International exhibit in Carnegie Galleries and attracted no attention whatever.

A spy has been telling us an episode in the life of Bill Wyman. The story goes that when a railroad strike impended some years ago the farseeing Mr. Wyman bought up a great supply of food, fearing that the crippled transportation facilities would cause a shortage. Well, the strike didn't take place and Mr. Wyman found his larder overflowing, the principal overflow being cans upon cans of beans. Fortunately, the price of beans immediately jumped sky-high and Mr. Wyman was entitled to laugh at one and all.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SANTA MONICA, Cal. Oct. 27.—OO-LA-GAH, Oklahoma, my real old home, had a fine celebration Saturday. Sure sorry I couldn't make it. Unemployment is terrible, but employment is worse.

Will Rogers.

A prominent minature golf course out here was robbed the other night. The bandits got five "putters" 13 balls, and 85 cents in currency.

Stanford University has always been kinder hard to get into, but after Saturday's game with Southern California they would take in any moron that couldn't even spell football, as long as he looked like he could carry one.

MAN 71, DIES, MOTHER OF 3 HURT

Hit-Run Drivers Caught After Chase; 2 Held as Truck, Fleeing Police, Upsets

One man was dead and eight were injured as a result of automobile accidents in the Pittsburgh district.

Henry Gross, 71, of 1924 Chislett street, died yesterday in the Pittsburgh Hospital from injuries suffered Friday when struck by an automobile at Penn and Negley avenue, according to police. Gross was said to have walked against the side of one automobile and to have been knocked down by another.

When an automobile in which they were riding crashed into a beacon light at South Twentieth and Sarah streets yesterday, John Morlein, 39, of 90 Pius street, and John Mackin, 38, of Magnolia street, were seriously injured. They are in the South Side Hospital. Edward Sipp, 23, of 3 Ormsby avenue, alleged driver, was arrested.

CRASH ENDS WILD RIDE

The wild ride of Gust Vargo, of 147 Trimble street, McKeesport, over the principal streets of the North Side and Woods Run, came to a halt when his truck crashed against a concrete car stop on the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks in Woods Run last night, police say. Dr. A. P. P. Huston, city physician pronounced him intoxicated, police reported. He was charged with violating the automobile laws.

Mrs. John McCoy, 49, of 5177 Kincaid street, suffered a fractured skull in automobile accident near Blairsville yesterday. The accident happened when her husband lost control of the machine. McCoy and their three children were uninjured. Mrs. McCoy is in the Westmoreland Hospital.

BROTHERS INJURED

Albert Schiefeldern, 39, of 531 North avenue, Millvale, and Hugo Schiefeldern, 53, of Meadville, brothers, were hurt seriously when their automobile was forced off the Babcock boulevard a mile north of Millvale. They were removed to St. Francis Hospital.

Elmer Crider, 36, of East Orchard street, Bellevue, sustained injuries of the leg at the same place in the Babcock boulevard when a machine he was driving was struck by a hit-run driver late Saturday night. Crider and a companion commandeered a passing car and caught the alleged driver. He was turned over to the Perrysville detail of the Highway Patrol. He said he was J. C. Holtzman, 40, of Snyder, N. Y. He was arrested on a charge of reckless driving.

HIT-RUN DRIVER HELD

James Stewart, 45, of Youngstown, O., suffered lacerations of the face and loss of blood when a car in which he was riding, and driven by John Dell, 33, also of Youngstown, according to the highway patrol, crashed into a car driven by J. C. Moore, 33, of Perrysville road, a mile north of Perrysville. Dell failed to stop after the accident, but was captured by Zellenople police when his car reached that town, police said. Moore and Dell escaped injury, highway patrolmen said.

Injured while fleeing McKeesport police, Steve Kovac, 32, of 438 Hopewell street, McKeesport, today was in McKeesport Hospital suffering from a fractured skull and internal injuries. He crashed his automobile through a closed gate at the Erie street crossing of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad.

Mark Cabraja, 30, and Nick Ribker, 22, both of McKeesport, companions of Kovac, were arrested. Kovac made an illegal turn at Fifth avenue and Walnut street and was signalled to stop, according to McKeesport police.

Miss Wilson, Thurston school teacher and organizer of the city's first "local history" class, in the Forsythe log cabin. It was built years ago for Ann's and Helen's great-great-great-grandmother.

Girl Pupils Visit Pioneer Cabin Home Built Here By Soldier Forbear

Capt. Peter Perchment, one day in the year 1783, gazed dreamily into the fire blazing merrily in his Virginia home. He was thinking of friends and fellow soldiers, of the ties that bound them to one another.

His face brightened as he turned his thoughts to a land on the other side of the mountains, in the vicinity of famous Fort Pitt. He unrolled a parchment document, read again the words written in the flourishing script of the times.

One hundred acres of land on the pike for his services as an officer under George Washington, for his deeds as a captain of the 13th Virginia regiment in the battles of Brandywine, Germantown and Valley Forge. Adventure, freedom, a new start—at 34, he had everything to which he might look forward.

Later he built himself a log cabin on his farm, where Wilkinsburg now stands, and, still later, a second cabin for his daughter, Nellie Perchment Forsythe.

Helen, 7, and Anne Price, 10, this year visited Nellie Perchment Forsythe's cabin where it now stands, on Penn avenue, near Negley. With them was a class of about 25 girls from the Thurston School, a class in "local history," first in the city, organized by the teacher, Miss Adeline Wilson.

To the class, it was just another adventure, an escape from rigid routine. To Helen and Anne, the day was red-lettered, for this Nellie Forsythe was their great-great-great-grandmother, as Capt. Perchment was their great-great-great-great-grandfather.

There was some of the original furniture to see, a picture of Nellie Forsythe's daughter, Margaret Forsythe, as she looked in her youth, spinning wheels, an old fireplace, a mahogany highboy brought over the mountains to the lonely little pioneer's cabin nestling in the hills near Fort Pitt.

Best of all, however, was a photographer with a new flash-light that didn't scare you with a big puff, the admiration of their fellow-students who wished that they, too, were descendants of Capt. Peter Perchment, to enjoy the fun that comes only to the youngster singled out for a moment of all-too-brief recognition.

Auto Test Period Near End, Many Cars Face Ban

More than 700,000 Pennsylvania motorists have yet to have their automobiles inspected in the annual mandatory examination period which ends Friday midnight. W. W. Mathews, deputy commissioner of motor vehicles, told the Pittsburgh Motor Club that out of Pennsylvania's 1,640,000 motor vehicles, more than 700,000 have not yet been examined.

Members of the state highway patrol today began an active campaign to enforce the inspection. All machines not bearing the O. K. sticker will be stopped along the highways and the drivers warned they will not be permitted to operate the machine after the end of the month unless it has been examined.

Nearly 2,000 persons attended a mass meeting held in the Y. M. and W. H. A. building under the auspices of the Jewish organizations yesterday afternoon, at which speakers criticized Great Britain for projected restriction of Jewish immigration into Palestine, charging violation of the Balfour declaration and mandate. The meeting was sponsored by the 65 Jewish organizations comprising the Pittsburg Branch of the American Jewish Congress.

The speakers were B. Zuckerman, of New York, vice president of the Congress; Rabbi Goodman A. Rose and Rabbi M. S. Sivitz, of Pittsburg; the Rev. James R. Cox, of St. Patrick's Church, I. Carmel, of Cleveland and I. Kahanovitz, of Greensburg. Max Engelberg presided, and S. L. Fuss, secretary of the congress, was chairman of the resolutions committee.

TOPE PREDICTS PINCHOT VICTOR

The Anti-Saloon League confidently expects the election of Gilford Pinchot as govenor of Pennsylvania and hopes for the election of 20 or 21 drys among the 36 congressmen to be chosen in the state, according to the Rev. Dr. Homer W. Tope, state superintendent of the league.

The Rev. Mr. Tope made his prediction in an address in the Lemington Avenue Presbyterian church yesterday. He said:

"Gifford Pinchot made a good governor before and has a dry record. The Anti-Saloon League the W. C. T. U. and the temperance organizations are presenting united front against a wet candidate who says he would use his influence to repeal our state law if elected. The Liberal party will not be able to put him over."

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Following the killing of "The Edgewater Kid," a member of Goldie Gorio's North Side gang, Kinky King, leader of the rival West Side gang, is murdered. Evidence points to Goldie, but crooked politics prevent his arrest. To satisfy the public, Polack Annie, the Kid's woman, and formerly Kinky's, is arrested. When the police chief refuses to release Annie, Goldie creates havoc by destroying public property. Later, he raids the jail and kidnaps Annie. The police give chase. As they close in, Goldie throws a twenty-dollar gold-piece at the chief, striking him in the eye, and escapes. The chief plans to deal with the gangsters in the only manner they understand. He makes a proposition to Joe Gleason, heir to Kinky's crown, whereby Gleason is to wipe out Goldie's gang, the rival territory to be his reward. Annie awakes in Gorio's golden palace and learns the gang leader also loved the Kid.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XVI.

The chief told "Secretary" Gleason, the enemy gang leader, that Chimp had "coughed up his guts"—but Chimp hadn't. The chief only hoped he would. In fact, the first 24 hours Chimp spent in the detention room, after he had been so ingloriously captured on the early morning Goldie Gorio stuck up Central Detail and abducted Polack Annie, were the most pleasant he had ever spent in jail.

The only thing that bothered him was his broken nose, which had been smashed with a double sawbuck gold piece by Goldie two days before, when Chimp spoke out of turn. But this injury was given the best of medical treatment, at the direction of the police. The cops were plenty courteous to Chimp, and he chuckled.

"Goldie's got these bulls hypped," he meditated.

Then little things began to bother Chimp. The first of these was when the lockup keeper glanced at his shoes and suggested:

"How about a little shine, Chimp?"

Chimp's shoes were a bit nondescript. So he took them off and gave them to the lockup. But he never got them back. Whenever he asked for them, the lockup would apologize and Chimp could hear his angry voice outside.

Treated Nice
Chimp Thinks Policemen Are Ignorant

Then Chimp decided to order cigarets. He smoked only one brand. They brought him some exotic cigarets of pungent Turkish tobacco. He refused them at first, but finally had to smoke them, when the lockup amiably told him that he had no one just then to send out for his favorite kind.

His meditations were inter-

MASK TORN FROM FACE BY VICTIM

Patrolman Wounded in Gun Duel; $2,000 Loot Taken From Store; 3 Cars Robbed

Mrs. Sarah Menzel, proprietor of a grocery at 926 Madison avenue, and Mrs. Catherine E. Wojtoszek, 1315 Veto street, a clerk, today in North Side Police Court identified James Procious, 21, of 304 Chestnut street, as one of four men who held up the store yesterday. Mrs. Menzel was felled by Procious, who fled without getting any money, she testified. She had torn a mask from her assailant's face.

Police later arrested Procious and three others, all of whom were held for court by Magistrate Ray Schneider on several charges. They were Rudolph Kocian, 119 Saw Mill way; William Barry, River avenue, and John Stibber, of Progress street.

ROB MILK MAN

The cash register was rifled of $32 by the thugs who, masked and armed, took $1.50 from Thomas Tayman, of 1806 Cottage place, a milk deliveryman, who was delivering an order. Mrs. Menzel was treated at the Allegheny General Hospital.

A Negro, known only as "Stable Albert," was sought today, police said, for the shooting of Patrolman James McAfee during a running gun battle following a holdup in a house at Fifth avenue and Colwell street, Saturday night.

Patrolman McAfee was shot in the leg and taken to Mercy Hospital. The Negro was said to have obtained $60 in the stickup and wounded the policeman in his flight. Police today questioned George Woods, 27, of 3417 Dawson street, believed to have been in the vicinity when McAfee was shot.

Two Negro bandits escaped with $12 after holding up a P. H. Butler store, at 301 Paulson avenue, Saturday night. F. J. Yetter, manager of the store was forced into a rear room.

When he gave battle to a Negro who attempted to rob him in a stable in the rear of 26 Elmore street early today, Max Stein, 45, of 639 Kirkpatrick street, was shot in the right shoulder. He was sent to Passavant Hospital.

HELD UP BY TRIO

Joseph Borir, of 37 Marion street, reported to police that three Negroes, two of them armed, held him up in front of his home early today and relieved him of $15.

Clothing valued at $2,000 was stolen over the week-end from the store of Isadore Klein, at 2228 Fifth avenue, according to police reports.

Three automobiles, parked in the downtown district, were looted of wearing apparel valued at $400. The machines, police said, were those of T. Labow, of Monessen; J. Landow, of 7430 Ben Hur street, and E. H. Courtney, of Washington, D. C.

A few hours after John Bracken, night watchman in Williams' garage, at 435 First avenue, had routed a thug who attempted to loot the cash register, Patrolman Hugh Lavery arrested Paul Newman, 38, no home, as a suspect, police said.

Hallas Parks, 23, a Negro, of 1413 Allegheny avenue, was in Pittsburgh Hospital with a possible fracture of the skull today as a result of being held up and beaten by two white men on Wheeler street.

State police today were searching for two men who, after accepting a lift from Eugene Allen, of Ford City, robbed him of all his money, his overcoat and automobile last night. Allen was returning home from Tarentum when the youthful pair accosted him for a ride.

PUT ON THE SPOT

By Jack Lait

rupted when two detectives appeared at his cell and affably announced:

"The Captain wants to see you a minute, Chimp."

So they marched him out of the cell and up 42 steel, corrugated steps to the Captain's office, laughing and joking all the way.

"Dat's no good for my dogs," he demurred. The Captain smiled at him and asked:

"By the way, Chimp, I want to get my records straight—what did you say your mother's maiden name was?"

"I ain't said," snapped Chimp, peevishly.

"Okay, boys, take him back," and the Captain arose and bowed to Chimp. Then, down 42 steel, corrugated steps. In his cell Chimp rubbed his soles through his stocking feet.

"Dem dumb fools!" he exclaimed. Then he yelled through the bars, "Where'n hell are my shoes."

Pretty soon a detective brought Chimp his favorite cigarets. Chimp did not have a match.

"Gimme a light," he said.

The bull felt in his pockets and found one match after diligent search. He struck it and held it up, and just as Chimp stuck his cigaret through the bars the detective snapped the match out.

"Dammit, I burnt my finger!" he exclaimed. He could not find another match. The lockup didn't have one. Chimp would have to wait until he went for one. But he didn't come back. Instead, after about ten minutes the two bulls who had taken him to the Captain before, reappeared.

"The Captain wants to see you, Chimp," they grinned.

"What t'hell does he want now?" moodily asked the prisoner. The cell door clanged open. Out. Up forty-two steel, corrugated steps in his stocking feet. Chimp was swearing now.

"What do you know about the stickup of that cigar store at—" the Captain began in sugary tones.

"I don't know nuttin'," petulantly replied Chimp. He had the unlighted cigaret still dangling from his lips. "I want me shoes—"

"Okay, boys, take him back," and the captain busied himself with some papers on his desk.

"S-a-y, what're youse buzzards tryin' to do to me?" he asked when they had taken him back to his cell. The two dicks appeared surprised.

"Why, Chimp," one of them said in a hurt voice, "we've been better to you than any prisoner I ever saw in this joint. By the way, what do you want for supper?"

Chimp, who had removed his socks and was rubbing his feet, brightened up somewhat.

"Gimme a sirloin steak, rare, wid onions," he began, "and some strong black coffee an' some French fried spuds—and don't forget dem damn matches and dem damn shoes!"

"Okay, Chimp," said the bull, "right away. You don't have to swear to get service here."

In 15 minutes the supper came. When it was uncovered Chimp found a small hamburger steak, fried to a crisp, mashed potatoes and—weak tea. Before he could protest, the two bulls were at his cell door.

"The captain wants to see you, Chimp," they announced in polite tones.

"Where's me shoes?" asked Chimp. "Me matches—me steak—me coffee—what the—"

But the dicks had already opened the cell door and were bowing to Chimp. They took him gently by the arms and led him—up 42 steel, metallically spiked steps to the captain's office.

"What year were you born, Chimp?" apologetically asked the captain, arising on Chimp's entrance.

"I ain't spillin' nothin'!" fairly shouted Chimp.

"Okay, boys, take him back," and the Captain sat down, still smiling. But Chimp pulled away from the dicks.

"I wanna make a beef, Captain!" exclaimed Chimp. The Captain looked surprised, and then nodded. "I ain't bein' treated right. I ain't got no shoes—I ain't got no matches—I ain't got no eats—I ain't got no nothin' what a man should have."

The Captain's brow clouded. He looked menacingly at the two detectives.

"Now, what's this?" he admonished. "I told you I wanted this man treated with the best of care. See what he wants and GET IT! I don't want to hear any more complaints from him."

Down 42 steel, razor-edged steps to his cell. When he arrived he saw a man inside calmly eating the last of his supper.

"Say, Lock-up!" called one of the dicks. "How'n hell did this fellow get in Chimp's cell—chuck him out."

The lock-up appeared worried and hustled the man out, the latter wiping his lips. When he had gone, Chimp found he had taken his cigarets, too.

All during the night the detectives appeared at regular intervals, apologetically and solicitiously, and marched Chimp up and down 42 hellishly barbed metallic steps in his stocking feet. And every fifteen minutes the Captain asked him some outlandish question, courteously and politely, and then scolded and stormed at the detectives for not attending to Chimp's wants.

Once Chimp got his cigaret lighted, when the detective stumbled and fell against him and knocked it to the floor, where he stepped on it. When the sun pinked the heavens in the East the little gangster was raving in his cell.

"Captain wants you," said the two dicks gaily.

"What t'hell do youse guys want? What youse want? Gimme a cigaret. Gimme a match. Oh, my poor dogs! Lemme out o' here! What t'hell youse want! I can't climb up. Let him come down. Gimme a match. They dragged him up 42 steel, corrugated, white-hot steps—the American Inquisition was about over.

MAGIC BACKED AS CHURCH AID

Magic was thrown out of the Temple, but it has a very effective place in religion, the Rev. G. V. Voorhess, pastor of the Venetia M. E. Church and a prominent magician, told the Methodist Episcopal Ministers' Association today.

He performed numerous tricks before them, in giving a practical demonstration of how he uses magic in his junior sermons to interest the young people of his congregation. Mr. Voorhees maintained it interests young people because there is a value to it before the eye, with the added element of mystery.

The Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers, and will photograph those interested.

Today's question: Pennsylvania Federation of Garden Clubs agreed that billboards marring scenery are a nuisance. What is your opinion?

BRYCE GRIFFIN, East End. The Pennsylvania Federation of Garden Clubs seems to have forgotten to consider the vacant lots and those covered with rubbish that are made to appear respectable by the presence of billboards. I think they are a good thing.

Mr. Griffin.

Miss Diebold.

MISS JUSTINE DIEBOLD, Aspinwall. I like billboards and I don't believe that they mar the scenery. I think everyone enjoys seeing them along the highway, offering a change after miles of nothing but scenery.

Mr. Crorys.

MISS BETTY CRORYS, Oakland. In my estimation, billboards do not mar the scenery, they merely add to it. I like them and I do not agree with the Pennsylvania Federation of Garden Clubs that they are sometimes a nuisance.

Mr. Geithner.

STANLEY GEITHNER, North Side, driver. Billboards are all right in the right places. They make an excellent advertisement, but should not interfere with scenery; when such becomes the case, then they would become a nuisance.

Mr. Sullivan.

VICTOR SULLIVAN, Homestead, laboratory worker. There is a proper place for billboards as well as for anything else. To place them in a residential district is out of the question. The ideal location for them is along the highways.

Mr. Scott.

REGIS SCOTT, Homestead, student, high school. As a general rule, billboards are a nuisance. They are placed in a position that mars some beautiful scenery. If, however, they are placed in a location suitable for them, I believe that they are all right.

STURGES HERE WITH NEW PLAY

Preston Sturges, here for the world premiere of his musical romance, "The Well of Romance," last night took part in the final rehearsals and helped whip the piece into final form.

He said:

"We opened the play in Pittsburgh because we feel that Pittsburgh is receptive to musical comedies. We hope Pittsburgh will like the play. After all, Magnesia, the country around which the play is built, is really a wonderful place."

Sturges, assisted by his corps of experts, last night took an active part in preparing the play for its premiere.

His wife, the former Eleanor Post Hutton, New York society woman, and cereal heiress, accompanied him to the rehearsal.

Sturges, the young man who achieved fame with his play "Strictly Dishonorable," has dug into another production which deals with a delicate subject, and bids fair to play havoc with conventionality. The play will open tonight at the Nixon Theater.

STYLISTS INTRODUCE LATEST CREATIONS IN WINTER COATS

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Oct. 27.—What do any of us care about the inclement weather that will soon be upon us if it is coated over and wrapped up in nice fabrics and rich furs? It has been many seasons since we have had such delightful coats with which to defy the elements and glorify the day. Furs are used with a lavish hand, each coat staking a claim to originality by virtue of its cleverly applied trimming. While the coat of black with black trimming must be placed at the top of the list of favorites we must not forget the importance of brown and gray on the color card. The coat of gray is an added starter as it has only recently made its appearance, but the brown coat is the most successful alternative to the black garment and is seen everywhere. There are some red and green coats, both with black fur trim, but these are more a matter of individual preference than a popular choice. But whatever the color nearly every coat is slightly defined at the waist, some more nipped-in than others. Furs are applied in the form of separate capes and boleros, all coats have sumptuous and original collars and cuffs, but not many have a fur border.

THE CALLOT COAT at the right is of dark brown, dull surfaced woolen material with lavish trimming of brown astrakan. The silhouette is narrow and slightly fitted at the waistline. The sleeves flaring below the elbow are fitted in raglan fashion at the shoulder.

Irish Leave No Doubt.
Panthers Outmatched.
Fight Hard in Defeat.
Rockne Team Is Marvel.

SPEED MAIN WEAPON THAT BEATS PITT

THE NICEST THING in connection with that Notre Dame-Pitt game is that it leaves nothing at all to argue about. One word tells the whole story, and when that word is said the decisive victory of the Irish has been explained. "SPEED" is the answer. That and perfect timing. Notre Dame had it, had it as few teams of this or any other season have had it. Pitt lacked it, save at intervals and save in a few individuals. Turn loose 11 phenomenal speedsters, perfectly timed, against 11 men averaging slower and also uneven in their speed, and you can come to only one conclusion.

Joe Savoldi.

Knute Rockne said after the game, "Notre Dame clicked as it never did before. Everything worked, every man did his job just right." Add to that the fact that Jock Sutherland was represented by several boys who had been out of the game most of the season with injuries, and that his squad doesn't possess, to begin with, the power or skill of Rockne's, and anyone who saw Saturday's spectacle will feel that it isn't necessary to censure the outmatched Panthers to find reason for their startlingly decisive defeat.

FOR DESPITE PITT'S gallant last-half stand and its three touchdowns, the defeat was overwhelming. Had it not been for Rockne's magnanimity in withdrawing most of his first-stringers before the third quarter started it is doubtful if the Panthers, fight as they did, could have placed so close a score on the records. How large a point total the Irish regulars would have rolled up had they continued steadily in action can only be conjectured.

A remarkable record they made in the first half, and which appears to have been generally overlooked, is the fact that they never lost the ball except the six times they kicked off—the opener and five after touchdowns. Not once were they held for downs, not once were they forced to punt. Every time they got the ball they went through for a touchdown, and that, too, without once resorting to a forward pass. Time expired before the fourth down on which the substituted second-stringers would have been forced to kick or pass at the end of the first half. Maybe you've seen some other team go through a whole half in a major game without being held for downs or being forced to kick, but you'll probaly have some difficulty in recalling it.

"WHY DON'T THEY stop Savoldi?" yelled Panther partisans in the stands unable to comprehend the inability of Pitt's players, famous for their hard, sharp tackling ever since the advent of Coach Sutherland, to bring down the marvelous Italian fullback.

Marchmount Schwartz

Undoubtedly some of the local lads were below form in their tackling efforts, but it ought also to be said that this fellow Savoldi has the most powerful straight arm that has ever been seen in this city. Several Pitt faces after the game bore eloquent testimony to the vigor of that mighty arm, as well as that of the brilliant Marchmount Schwartz—he was named for a race horse and he sure lives up to it—who combines with this talent an exceptional elusiveness.

NOTRE DAME MEN who, because they play on the line and are not mentioned as ball carriers, have received less praise than their fine work merited, are Art McManmon and Joe Kurth, mighty tackles; Bert Metzger, the lightest man on either squad but a great guard though weighing only 155 pounds, and Paul Host, whose brief appearance at end proved him to be a splendid defensive player. Apart from the backfield, it was at the tackles and ends that Pitt was most definitely outmatched. The superiority of the Irish here was manifest both in their ability to break through Pitt's interference on many occasions, and in the much better protection which the Notre Dame first-string forwards gave their ball carriers.

PITT'S FAMED INTERFERENCE formed as well Saturday as ever it did, and that at all stages of the game. "Formed" is the word. But function it did not, with any regularity, owing to the skill and speed with which those Irish tackles and ends filtered through. Many times a Pitt interferer hit a Notre Dame tackler who not only didn't go down, but rolled off to place himself right back in the play again. Notre Dame interference, on the other hand, was a work of art.

No condemnation of the Pitt boys is in order. They did their best under tough conditions, against superior opponents. One drawback, however, was that the secondary defense was conspicuously weak, with Josh Williams and Franklin Hood, oft-crippled during recent weeks, the principal offenders.

EDDIE BAKER, WHO does all things well, and Jimmy Clark, who relieved Hood, did much to prevent a complete collapse in that respect, and showed that they, at least, had lost none of the tackling ability for which Pitt is noted.

Eddie Baker

The loss of Ralph Daugherty in the second quarter was a hard blow. He is the keystone of the Panther line, and though Joe Tormey struggled valiantly, he made two or three poor passes which hurt like the mischief.

TWO PANTHER FORWARDS ought not to be permitted to lose a meed of praise. Ernest Lewis and Walter Milligan, lost to fame, just a pair of guards, stood out in the Pitt line. Outplayed the Pitt ends and tackles were. Outplayed these two lads were not. Lewis, least conspicuous of all Pitt's regulars throughout the season, came into his own and played a whale of a game. Little Milligan, 165 pounds of grit, filled the place of crippled Hart Morris and filled it well. And if another local player merits special mention it is Paul Reider, flashy New Castle boy, whose keen and daring play after he took Williams' place caught the eye of the crowd, which otherwise was monopolized so far as the home boys were concerned, by Jimmy Clark's prowess.

EDDIE BAKER, PITT'S best quarterback in many a year, kicked beautifully, interfered brilliantly, tackled hard and effectively, ran his team with fine judgment, and got all the strength there was out of a sorely overmatched aggregation. Given support like that with which the great Frank Carideo is blessed, this smart, likable lad would be famed from coast to coast.

More than one spectator commented on the untiring leadership he gave his weary companions and on his fine sportsmanship during and immediately after the game. This boy's name will go down in the list of Pitt's immortals.

Many a jeer, on the other hand, fell to the lot of poor Jim MacMurdo, and to those who were guilty of riding this boy it should be

Emmett Rocco, of Ellwood City, will face a determined young man when he stacks up against George Panka, Homestead's rising young heavyweight, in the 10-round main bout at Motor Square Garden tonight.

Panka has gained the notion that he will knock out Rocco. Perhaps the wish is father to the thought, but he has become so imbued with the idea that he has given expression to what is in the back of his head.

"I never was in better shape for a fight than I am at this time," he said today. "If I lose I will have no excuses to offer. I saw Rocco defeat Tom Heeney a few weeks ago and was not impressed by his form. In fact, until the closing stages of the bout, when Heeney began to bleed badly from old cuts, Rocco was on the losing end. I think I put up a much more satisfactory fight over the route against Heeney at the Meyers Bowl, although I did not get the decision, and I think I know how to fight Rocco. I will go into the ring with the idea of knocking him out, and, if I fail in that, I feel certain I can box my way to the decision. But I hope to win by a knockout."

REWARD FOR WINNER

When big fellows clash, especially if they have a punch, almost anything may happen. And the fans like to see the big boys bounce off the canvas. That's why one of the largest crowds of the season will sit in on tonight's shindy. The advance sale has been the best of the season so far.

Tonight's windup battle means much to both principals. The Garden already has a match tentatively lined up for the winner that will net him a large slice of what is commonly known as filthy lucre.

Eddie Brannon, hard-hitting Negro lightweight, of the Hill, meets Jimmy Reed, of Erie, in the eight-round semi-final, and Johnny Kusic, of Youngstown, boxes Jackie Murray, of the Hill, and Len (Swede) Johnson, of the North Side, light-heavyweight stablemate of Panka, opposes Paul Rinsko, of Charleroi, in the two six-round preliminaries, with the show getting under way at 8:30.

CRAWLEY BOXES LENNY

Tommy Crawley, South Side lightweight, boxes Ralph Lenny, that clever Jerseyite, in one of the six-round preliminaries to Tommy Freeman's non-title bout with Sergt. Sammy Baker at the Arena in Philadelphia tonight. Babe Ruth and Freddie Miller furnish the windup action of a show at Wheeling. Marty Gold, veteran flyweight, of Philadelphia, who has done some good boxing around here recently, meets Frenchy Belanger at Toronto.

Tom Malco, of Soho, and Larry Madge, of Cleveland, box the main bout at the Moose Temple Friday night.

Billy Brent, Negro middleweight, of the Hill, and Jimmy Taylor, of Cleveland, will box the semi-final, and George Annarino, of Ohio, and Jackie Wilson, of Homewood, are in the opener. The second bout has not yet been arranged.

DAVIES TO BOX BELL

Willie Davies, of Charleroi, and Archie Bell, of New York, have been signed to box the windup at Motor Square Garden next Monday night. The articles call for 120 pounds, but both men will be under that figure, Bell likely scaling around 119 and Davies between 116 and 117. Davies has cleaned up just about everything in the flyweight ranks and this bout will mark his invasion of the bantamweight division. It's a great match on paper and should draw well.

TOMORROW: HIS EIGHTEENTH MARATHON.

IRISH VICTORY OVER PITT IS IMPRESSIVE

By JESS CARVER.

They poured a lot of things out of the nation's football bottle Saturday that might just as well have been left inside. Many and varied are the aches and pains among the boys this morning, what with Pitt bowed low under the defeat by Notre Dame; New York University's mails over the 7-0 setback at the hands of Fordham; Army's unsatisfactory tie with Yale; the setback suffered by Wisconsin at the hands of Purdue and U. S. C.'s trouncing of Stanford.

The eyes of the nation were on the game here between the Irish and the Panthers. Better than 70,000 sat and looked on as Knute Rockne paraded his great eleven against Pitt, and served as decisive a beating as any Pitt team ever has taken.

IRISH IMPRESSIVE

Notre Dame Saturday looked thrice as impressive beating Pitt, 35-19, as Southern California did last New Year's Day winning, 47-14. The Irish, in that hectic first half, exhibited everything that a great football team should, and had Rockne so elected, he might have sent his green-clad warriors dashing to a 60 or 70-point defeat. It was a fine gesture on the part of Coach Knute when he kept his second and third stringers in there until late in the ball game, after his crack first eleven had piled up its overwhelming lead.

Oh, what a boy, this fellow Schwartz! Jumping Joe Savoldi is good enough, but Schwartz. He has everything. He can pass (although we didn't get to watch him flip 'em Saturday) and the thousands who saw him cruise off Pitt's tackles and around Pitt's ends, will testify to his ability to tote the ball. That 59-yard run was as neat a bit of runnin' as has been flashed in the Stadium since the year of the two big winds.

BRILLIANT RALLY

Pitt's brilliant rally in the last period, when Jimmy Clark and Bulldog Reider engineered three touchdowns, aided by a big break when Fullback Howard, of Notre Dame, fumbled near the goal line, saved the morale of the Panthers and will serve to keep 'em in the ball game for the rest of the year. They'll probably give Nebraska a trouncing this week, and you can lay the rent right on the line that Carnegie Tech will have a ball game on its hands the afternoon of November 8.

A paragraph or two above, I mentioned that Rockne might have won by a greater score than 35-19. I expect to get a lot of snooty letters over that crack, but don't forget this—when Rock did send back his first stringers, in an attempt to stop that last Pitt score, and when Savoldi got the ball and came within two men of running it back for another score, the Irish looked as good and Pitt as weak as they did in the first half.

It was just a case of a great Notre Dame team meeting an ordinary Pitt eleven. There is no discredit to be reflected on anyone.

TECH CRUSHES RESERVE

While Pitt was meeting its Waterloo, Carnegie was showing fine recovering after its defeat at the hands of the Irish the week previous, by kicking poor Western Reserve around. The Tartans exhibited crushing power in their first half attack. Johnny Graveno stepped out and demonstrated to his home town fans that he is a real ball player.

Poor Chick Meehan! Something always happens to spoil Chick's season just when he thinks he has things well under control. I think he expected to knock Fordham over Saturday, but a fumble and a well-drilled

HANK BRUDER RELEASED

CHICAGO, Oct. 27.—(AP.)—Bad news for Northwestern's future football foes:

Hank Bruder Northwestern's famous jinx star, today emerges from the Chicago Isolation Hospital, where he has been confined with a slight attack of smallpox for the past two weeks.

Pronounced recovered, the great Wildcat triple-threat player hoped to jump right back into uniform for immediate work against Minnesota Saturday if needed in the fight to keep his team heads up in the campaign for the Big Ten championship. He was in fairly good condition because of long dummy practices in the back yard of the hospital.

Bruder, heralded by Coach Dick Hanley, of Northwestern, as the greatest football player he has ever seen, injured his side and was forced out most of the season in 1928; in 1929 he broke his leg in his first conference game against Wisconsin, and this year smallpox kept him out of all but one game.

LOCAL MANAGER FOR JACKETS

By CARL W. SHATTO.

Roy D. Schooley, president of the new local ice hockey club in the International League, has announced that the pilot of the Yellow Jackets this season will be a Pittsburgher, to be appointed in the near future. He also hopes to have the opening skirmish against the London sextet, played at Duquesne Garden on Armistice Day, instead of November 13, as originally set on the schedule, and denies the local club will be a farm for National League skaters.

Charles King, president of the International League, with headquarters at Windsor, is due here sometime this week to confer with Schooley regarding the matter of representation on the board of directors, which the local prexy will fill, and to set the date for the opening conflict.

Schooley has said that he is looking about for a farm club in the Canadian Pro League, and may close a deal soon.

ENS TO SIGN SOON, REPORT

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

Manager Jewel Ens, of the Pirates, probably will sign a contract for next year within the next few days. The Buccaneer pilot and his family expect to leave Pittsburgh soon. Ens intends to spend a part of the winter in Florida. He has some personal business to look after before he gets away.

Jewel had a conference with Owner Dreyfuss today. The owner and manager talked over some of the new players who will be with the club next season. Jewel expects to come North for the December meetings.

Capt. Harold (Pie) Traynor, of the Pirates, who has been visiting in Cincinnati, home of his bride-to-be, Miss Eva Helmer, is expected in town early this week to spend a few days.

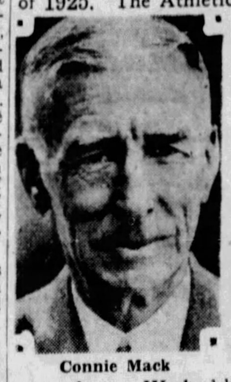
MY FIFTY YEARS IN BASEBALL

By CONNIE MACK,
Manager, World Champion Philadelphia Athletics

INSTALLMENT NO. 43.

The addition of so many promising players made our prospects bright while we trained at Fort Myers, Fla., in the spring of 1925. The Athletics always leave Florida a little ahead of other teams in training, for every year we play a spring series with the Phillies in Philadelphia just before the pennant race starts.



Connie Mack

Everything was going along swimmingly until this series. In one of the games with our National League rivals we had the misfortune to lose the services of Joe Hauser, our young first baseman.

He broke a kneecap in several places in an odd manner. There was no collision with another player; he was not hit in the kneecap. He jumped in the air to catch a wild throw and when he came down his kneecap was fractured.

His loss at the start of the season was a facer. We had bought Hauser from the Milwaukee club several seasons before and he was just getting good. He was fast developing into a great home run hitter and that spring in Fort Myers he made such a spectacular home run drive that the fans tossed money at him after he crossed the home plate.

HAUSER BREAKS KNEE

There can be no more severe injury to a ball player than a broken kneecap, and, in nine cases out of 10, it will end his career.

Hauser came back to hit 63 home runs for Baltimore last season.

I had to look around quickly for another first sacker with the opening of the season only a few days away.

Once again my friend Tom Turner came to my rescue. The first baseman of the Portland club was Jim Poole, a big-sized chap who lived in a small town in North Carolina.

Poole had not reported to Portland that spring because of a salary disagreement. The news of Hauser's accident was printed the next day all over the nation.

When Turner read the news that Hauser had been so severely hurt, he took the initiative himself. He shot a wire to Poole telling him to report to Connie Mack at once. Then he wired me what he had done and said if I liked Poole and wanted him he would accept any terms I would mention.

JIM POOLE REPORTS

As soon as he received Turner's wire, Poole, wondering what had happened, took the next train for Philadelphia and actually reported before the series with the Phillies had ended.

I looked him over, watched him work and signed him to a contract. I think it was the most unorthodox transaction I ever made in my life. Poole jumped in

AKRON BLANKS BURNS, 19-0

AKRON, O., Oct. 27.—The educated toe of Mike Gregory and beautiful runs by Limric and Stanford for touchdowns gave the South Akron Awnings a 19-0 victory over the Burns A. A., of New Kensington, here yesterday.

Both teams battled on even terms through the first half, neither team advancing the ball farther than the other's 40-yard line. The Burns club's only chance to score came in the first period when Hartman missed a place kick from the Awning 43-yard line.

A field goal from the 15-yard line in the third period by Gregory gave the Awnings a 3-0 lead. Soon after Limric took one of Red Kirkman's aerials 30 yards and across the Burns club's goal line, Gregory booted the extra point.

Again in the fourth period Gregory kicked a field goal from the 30-yard line. Near the end Stanford intercepted Dunn's pass and ran 48 yards for the final Awning score. The lineup:

FORWARD PASS MOST POPULAR OF GRID PLAYS

WARNER SEES INCREASE IN AIR ATTACKS

By GLENN S. (POP) WARNER,
Member All-America Board of Football.

The football season is half over and one of the developments which has become very noticeable is the great increase in the development and use of the forward pass as a means of advancing the ball and to a lesser extent, the increasing use of the lateral pass. Some of the weaker teams physically, unable to make headway against their heavier opponents by rushing plays, have given their opponents plenty of trouble by developing a strong and clever forward passing attack and some of the outstanding upsets which have occurred have been caused by a very clever use of the passing game by supposedly weaker teams. I believe statistics will show that as many or more points have been scored thus far this season in the important games by the forward pass as by rushing the ball by running plays.

Pop Warner

AERIAL ATTACKS GAIN

The forward pass is coming more and more to be a real part of nearly every team's offense rather than a mere emergency play to be used only as a last desperate resort when running plays have utterly failed. Many teams are using the pass as their main offensive weapon and only using running plays to keep the defense from scattering too much. This is just the opposite strategy to that which was the rule when the forward pass was first legalized by the rules committee.

When the committee made the distance to gain to get a first down 10 yards instead of five and ruled out pushing or assisting the runner, it was obvious to the rule makers that something would have to be done to scatter the defense if running plays were to be at all successful, and therefore, the forward pass was legalized to force the defense to play some of their players well back and thus prevent them from concentrating in close formation to stop running plays. Until recent years most coaches used the forward pass just enough to keep the defense so scattered and in fear of passes, but relied mostly upon running plays for their main offense.

Few passes were thrown and then only when the distance to gain was obviously too great to be made by a running play or when the opponents were ahead toward the end of the game and the only way to possibly win was by a reckless use of the pass in the hope of connecting with a lucky one. We still see those desperate and reckless forward passing efforts of teams who are behind in the closing minutes of the game, but we also see a lot of forward passing on first and second downs throughout the game instead of only on third downs as was the case a few years ago.

REQUIRES SPEED

The forward pass is a play which requires speed and cleverness, and a team made up of beefy players who may perhaps be powerful enough to make their running plays go, will be beaten by a lighter, cleverer team which, perhaps, can gain little ground by rushing methods. The Minnesota-Vanderbilt game was a good illustration of this very thing. Vanderbilt was a much lighter team than Minnesota and, of course, much faster. The Southern players could make no headway trying to use power plays, but they were exceedingly clever at the open game and that sort of a game worked unusually well against their heavier and slower opponents. In other words, Vanderbilt, although out powered, out stickered the big boys and made them look bad. They succeeded with their own passes and intercepted the passes of their opponents and gave a great exhibition of the value of speed and cleverness over sheer power.

One week later Minnesota met Stanford, and with neither team composed of the speedy and clever type of players, but with both teams depending mostly upon outpowering their opponents without resorting to passing, there was no scoring at all—an interesting contrast to the rather free scoring by both teams when one or both of those teams specialize in the passing game.

UPSETS MARK GRID PLAY

Fordham line put things on the grease.

New York U.'s defeat didn't do Buddy Overend, out at Carnegie Tech, any good either, for instead of coming here this week undefeated, the Violets will be just another ball club that has been handed a berth among those who-tried-but-failed. Fordham, probably, will begin claiming things, which claims will promptly be laughed off, as the East still refuses to take Maj. Cavanaugh's scrappers seriously.

DUKES COP

Tri-state district elevens performed in creditable fashion, either Saturday or in night games Friday. The Dukes battered out a 13-0 win over Dutch Bergman's Catholic University of America eleven at Forbes Field Friday evening, hanging up their firth consecutive triumph.

Catholic U. presented a stubborn defense, but the local disciples of the Notre Dame system took advantage of the breaks to salt the ball game away.

Maude Crum's Allegheny eleven, undefeated to date, displayed crushing power in downing a hard fighting Adrian College team at Meadville. Crum has done wonders with the Methodists this year, and appears to have restored the Meadville school to the plane it should occupy in district football.

Wash-Jeff eked out a 7-0 win over Herb McCracken and his Lafayette Maroons in the huge public auditorium in Atlantic City Saturday night, a recovered fumble being the fly in the ointment for Mr. McCracken. The victory over Lafayette partially restored the prestige lost by the Presidents when they were tied by Wittenberg and beaten by Temple.

Temple, after eliminating both Bucknell and Wash-Jeff from the ranks of the undefeated, met up with big-lettered trouble in Harry Stuhldreher's Villanova club and, lo and behold, the Main Liners won by an 8 to 7 margin. The score recalls the baseball season. It was an inspired eleven that Stuhldreher pitted against Temple.

Army and Yale wound up in a 7-7 deadlock. The Army, with a crack backfield and a strong line, failed to play up to snuff, and Yale, after scoring in the first period and being scored on in the second, held the Army at bay for the remainder of the game.

Dartmouth had more trouble in downing Harvard than generally was expected, but finally carved out a 7-2 victory. Penn, defeated a week ago by Wisconsin, came back nobly to crush Lehigh. Brown beat Holy Cross, taking advantage of fumbles and the Navy demonstrated totally unexpected power in running wild for a 31-0 victory over Princeton.

Colgate, where Andy Kerr is running things, put the works to Penn State and ran up a 40-0 score. It was a tough one for Bob Higgins, who is serving his first year at State as head coach, but the victory still does not erase the black mark of the Michigan State defeat the week before from Colgate's record.

In the Big Ten, Purdue nailed Wisconsin and Michigan downed Illinois. In non-Conference tussles, Northwestern wrecked Centre and Chicago tied Mississippi.

It was a tough day all around for the Warner system. While Pitt was being trimmed here, Pop Warner himself took a licking on the coast as Howard Jones' University of Southern California eleven romped away to a 41-12 victory. Washington defeated California and Washington State continued the good work by walloping Montana.

Alabama beat Vanderbilt in the South as Ogelthorpe took Loyola; Tulane walloped Georgia Tech and Tennessee nosed out North Carolina, 9 to 7.

FIFTY YEARS IN BASEBALL

and played first base for me, and then I made the deal with Turner for his services. That certainly put the cart before the horse.

Our team started that season with Poole at first, Bishop at second, Galloway at short, Hale at third and Simmons, Lamar and Miller in the outfield. Our catchers were Cochrane and Perkins, and for pitchers I had Grove, Walberg, Gray, Rommell, Quinn, Harris and Baumgartner.

The race in 1925 from the start until the end of August was close and exciting.

ANOTHER CONTENDER

For the first time since 1914, I had a ball club that was a real contender. We see-sawed in first place with the Washington team, which had won the pennant and world championship the year before.

On August 17, the Athletics opened in the West on its final trip two and one-half games in first place.

As on the two previous western trips we had made a better showing than Washington, we fully expected to gain further on this final tour and capture the championship. This seemed only natural.

Baseball, however, is a game of surprises, and surprises often are shocks. Instead of our club romping through the West, we lost three straight games in St. Louis, dropping two of them in the last inning.

BEATEN OUT BY NATS

While we were slumping in St. Louis, Washington took three straight in Cleveland and swept us out of the lead. The Senators gained the lead on August 20 and held it to the finish and won their second straight championship.

At the end of the season, Washington met Pittsburgh in the World Series, and, although the Senators won three out of the first four games, they lost the blue letter event to the National Leaguers, three games to four.

Newman Hailed As Second Ben Friedman

CHICAGO, Oct. 27.—(AP.)—They are hailing Harry Newman, 19-year-old Jewish lad from Detroit, as a second Benny Friedman at the University of Michigan.

Newman, in each of Michigan's three Big Ten triumphs, flashed the same forward-passing skill that made Friedman an all-America star.

Crofton Would Buy Madison Sq. Garden

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—(INS.)—Jim Crofton, who started with a sombrero and finished with a race track, will come into New York today to see whether money will buy one of its cherished landmarks, Madison Square Garden, for 10 years the soul and the sinew of prize fighting in America. Crofton, it is understood, has upward of $2,000,000 to offer for 51 per cent of the stock and, while there is no guarantee that the transaction can be closed, it is regarded as being far from unimportant that the Garden heads are prepared to hear the man's story.

"I don't think the stock can be bought," Frank J. Bruen, general manager, declared this morning. "However, we are here to listen."

YALE STAR HURT WHEN TACKLED

Albie Booth, Yale's famous halfback, was knocked out when three Army tacklers crashed into him as he intercepted a forward pass at the start of the game at the Yale Bowl Saturday, and he had to be carried from the field on a stretcher, through for the day. The teams battled to a 7-7 tie.

Booth Doing Well, To Play Saturday

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 27.—(AP.)—Yale's most important hospital patient, little Albie Booth, is "doing well," his physicians reported last night.

His injuries are described as "blows on the head, mouth and back." Serious and painful as they must be, Yale officials state that Booth will be able to play against Dartmouth Saturday.

The midget quarterback, who was smeared on the first play after he entered the Yale-Army game Saturday, will remain in the college infirmary possibly until tomorrow. No one seems willing to say when he will leave.

PARKERS BOW; MAJESTICS TIE OLYMPICS

INDEPENDENT CONFERENCE.

By TOM BIRKS.

Followers of independent grid circles saw two great battles fought yesterday afternoon. East Pittsburgh flashed the big surprise by defeating Paul Munzie's West View aggregation, 7 to 2, at the Quarry Stadium. The Majestics and McKeesport Olympics battled to a scoreless tie at the Bridgeview Speedway.

A long forward pass, Carroll to Philpot, in the first quarter spelled defeat for the Red and White, of West View. After this unexpected play Munzie's machine was unable to click.

PASS TURNS TIDE

However, it was a fine play and found Philpot at his best, taking the ball from two West View defenders. The pass was good for 20 yards. Eluding Roddy Cole, playing safety, Philpot raced 22 yards for the touchdown.

The only West View score came when Brown uncorked a bad pass and Joe Wambaugh fell on the ball for a safety.

The Olympics and Majestics staged one of those scoreless tie battles in which the teams did not have the punch to put over the pigskin when in scoring position.

The Majestics started with Kelsh flashing in the limelight with a 20-yard run. Jimmy Rooney and Kelsh both tried placement kicks which went wide in the first quarter.

The Olympics threw a scare into the Majestic rooters when English batted down one of Jimmy Rooney's punts and marched the ball to the four-yard line. Then Dangerfield fumbled. That was the best chance the Olympics had to score.

PLENTY OF PASSES

The second half found Barnes and Rooney throwing forward passes all over the field, and both teams intercepted heaves. Rooney and Barnes also staged a punting duel, with honors about even.

For the Majestics, Karcis, Rooney and Kelsh were good, while for the Olympics, English, Sapp, Boyer and Boots Klinzing played a stellar game. Five thousand fans crowded into the Speedway to watch the battle, but the crowd at the Quarry Stadium was disappointing. The lineups:

Macaluso, Colgate, Leads Grid Scorers

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—(AP.)—Scoring 28 points against Penn State, Leonard Macaluso, Colgate's plunging fullback, jumped into the lead in Eastern individual scoring Saturday. Four touchdowns and four points after touchdown sent Maculuso's total points for five games to 70 points, which were assembled by the means of nine touchdowns and the kickng of 16 extra points.

Jim Murphy, who led the pack a week ago, counted Fordham's only touchdown in the New York University game, but trailed the Colgate star by four points. His 66 points having been gained by 11 touchdowns. With Cornell idle, Viviano dropped back to third place with 60 points, while Tanquay, New York University sophomore ace, continued to press the leaders with 59 points.

Macaluso also led the high scorers in booting points after touchdown with a total of 19. Hewitt, of Columbia, joined Scalzi of Georgetown, and Booth, of Yale, as the only top notchers to kick a field goal.

GIANTS IN RUNNING

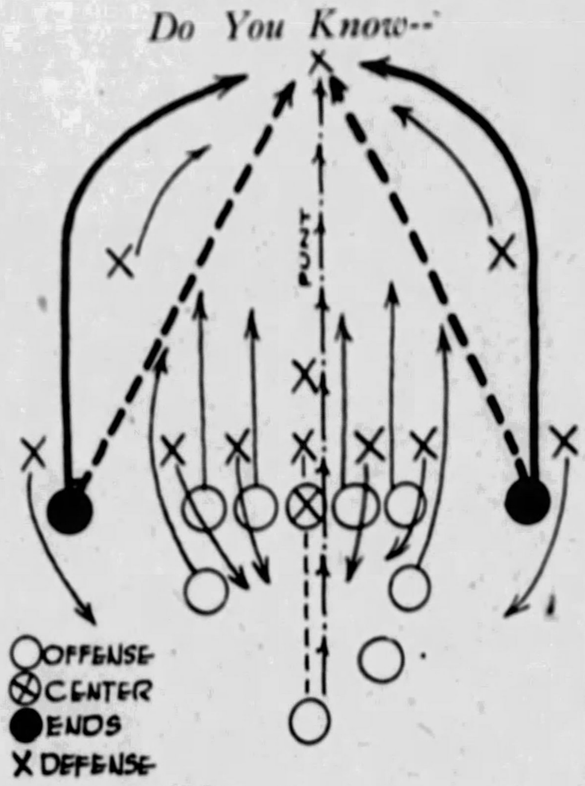
SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS

FOOTBALL FUNDAMENTALS

By Howard Harpster

All-America Quarterback at Carnegie Tech, 1928. Now Head Coach at Geneva College.

Do You Know--



THAT When the ends run down the field to tackle the ball carrier following a kick they should not run directly toward the player who has caught the ball, as illustrated above by the broken lines, but should go down parallel to each other, as shown by the heavy lines, and thus force the runner to come up the middle?

The obvious reason for this is that the other nine men on the kicking side all are between the ends, and, by forcing the ball carrier to come up the middle, there is very little chance of his getting away for a long run.

However, if the terminals should run directly at the ball carrier, and allow him to get around either of them, the runner has a fine chance of making a long gain, because once outside the end the runner is outside the entire kicking team.

Long's Sport Comment

said that not one of his detractors would have been in this or any other football game were he in the same condition that Jim was in on Saturday.

One of the few veterans at Coach Sutherland's disposal, one of the few big men, it appeared needful that he stick in there if at all possible, and stick he did, never giving up, even though his play was frequently futile, only occasionally bringing results.

Jim MacMurdo

IT IS TRUE that MacMurdo does not look like a high-grade end, whereas he certainly is a topnotch tackle. Perhaps the Pitt coach will move him back to the position he plays so well, now that Ted Dailey, gritty sophomore, has developed so suddenly to reinforce the efforts of the other regular wingmen, Eddie Hirshberg and Paul Collins. Many Panther followers believe that right now Dailey and Hirshberg, who did so well on Saturday, are Pitt's best ends.

THOUGH AT TIMES an individual stood out on the Notre Dame side, it was as a team that the Irish knocked your eye out. Oh boy! What a machine! The whole supply of football superlatives would hardly describe it. Tremendous power, amazing speed, perfect smoothness of action, and clockwork perfection of timing, motion and coordination. A bearcat line from end to end, and in Carideo, Schwartz, Brill and Savoldi probably the best backfield in America—or at least as good as any other, for it is hard to conceive that any better could exist. Even when they're crushing your own team, you can't fail to get a thrill out of the beauty and rhythm of the Irish action, the speed and deception of their plays.

Most of the spectators at Saturday's game agreed that the 1930 Notre Dame eleven is not only better than the famed champions of 1924, but it is the best college team they ever saw in any year. It is hard to see how it can be defeated in any of the games it has yet to play with Indiana, Penn, Drake, Northwestern, Army and Southern California. And, as usual, Coach Rockne runs it with rare judgment. By using his numerous replacements when things are safe—he had 38 men in uniform Saturday—he not only saves his first-stringers for other hard games ahead, but he schools his reserves for the regular posts they will be called upon to fill in years to come. And in the same system he proves himself a sportsman—he never humiliates any opponents by trying for record-breaking scores when he has them hopelessly beaten.

W. Don Harrison

WHO EVER SAW a large crowd handled so quickly and so well? Perhaps the real hero of the day was not the astute Rockne, nor his marvelous team, nor fighting Jimmy Clark, nor heroic Eddie Baker, nor the peerless Schwartz, but the unseen and unsung Stadium crew of Pitt that put more than 72,000 persons into the huge bowl quickly and without friction and got them out the same way, despite the handicaps of counterfeit tickets and other unusual difficulties.

Few holders of spurious pasteboards penetrated the gates at all, and astonishingly few were the disputes in the capacity crowd over seats. Another compliment to Athletic Director W. Don Harrison and his aides in the Pitt management lies in the fact that among the couple of thousand tickets picked up in the possession of scalpers and their victims, only a comparative few were genuine, showing that every precaution had been taken to keep the ducats out of the hands of speculators.

Loayza Wins Chile Lightweight Crown

SANTIAGO, Chile, Oct. 27.—(AP.)—Stanislau Loayza, who has done most of his fighting in the United States in recent years, yesterday won the lightweight championship of his native country, Chile, getting a technical knockout over Luis Vicentini in the final round of their scheduled 10-round bout.

SUBSIDIZATION OF ATHLETES SUGGESTED

Park College does not engage in intercollegiate sports and all students are required to earn at least part of their college education by performing menial tasks about the campus.

"The rules," he said, in commenting on the qualified expulsion of the University of Kansas from Big Six Conference sports, "are untenable, cannot be enforced and should be abolished.

Charges of recruiting and questioning of the eligibility of James A. (Jarring Jim) Bausch, backfield star, who sells insurance for pay, led the faculty athletic council meeting in Columbia, Mo., to bar Kansas at the close of the scholastic year.

"If Big Six athletic rules," Dr. Hawley remarked, "were applied to other college ventures, it would be virtually impossible for many youths to get an education.

"I see no reason an athlete should not be permitted to use his special abilities to earn his way through school. It is no worse and no better to capitalize your athletic prowess throwing hash or hooting a football.

"Students who excel in their studies are given scholarships. There are scholarships in all ds of professional and trade schools.

"Why not similar ones," asked the head of the athlete-less Park College, "for athletic factories?"

MAKE OWN INVESTIGATION

LAWRENCE, Kan., Oct. 27.—(AP.)—Evidence resulting in the virtual ostracism of the University of Kansas from Big Six Conference athletics on charges of alleged recruiting and subsidization of athletes, was presented the school athletic board yesterday, which then announced it was making its own private investigation.

In a formal statement, the athletic board said that George C. Shaad, Kansas member of the Bix Six faculty advisory group had reported evidence leading to the Conference order was inadequate. Following the meeting Dean Shaad said that James Bausch, star K. U. football player named in the complaint, would not be barred from competition.

CARDS TOP SPARTANS

CHICAGO, Oct. 27.—(AP.)—Ernie Nevers and the Chicago Cardinals dealt the pro football title aspirations of the Portsmouth Spartans a ruinous jolt yesterday. With Nevers scoring 17 points, the Cards did a comeback to chalk up a 23-to-13 triumph at Comiskey Park.

Sport Vignettes

Football games may come and football games may go, but will any one who saw it ever forget the scene etched on memory by the Pitt-Notre Dame classic at the Stadium last Saturday? . . . The remarkable clicking of the Irish machine that swept a hitherto unscored upon Pitt eleven before it to the tune of five touchdowns in the first half . . . . The magnificent rally of the groggy Panther forces that produced three touchdowns in the final period . . . . The galloping of Carchmount, Schwartz and Brill and Savoldi and their relief men . . . . The first view of a packed and jammed Stadium . . . . Thrill following upon thrill as runner after runner broke out into the open.

Better football teams may have been welded together in the past or may come along in the future than that Notre Dame aggregation, but you'll have a hard time telling that to any of the thousands of fans who glimpsed this one in action . . . . Carnegie Tech needs no alibi for its 21-6 defeat at South Bend a week before, after this exhibition by the Irish against Pitt . . . . The remarkable feature of Tech's game is that the Plaid was not as badly overwhelmed as Pitt in the early stages . . . . No Pitt team ever is a setup, as this year's demonstrated by its gallant comeback to the heights after its early rout, and any foe that crushes it so convincingly must have everything that combines to make for real greatness.

The manner in which Notre Dame's linemen blocked was a revelation. Seldom have local fans been privileged to see such gaping holes opened not only in the forward wall, but in the secondary defense as well, as on this occasion. Speed, agility, sheer power and aggressiveness are necessary to accomplish such results . . . . The Pitt line that successfully fought off eight touchdown drives by Syracuse the week before was utterly unable to control the situation against the Irish . . . . Give full credit to the rambling, hard-running backs of Notre Dame, but don't forget that without that remarkable blocking by the linemen these men never would have been able to get loose.

No finer illustration of the superior blocking of the Irish forwards is necessary than that swell picture of Schwartz getting away for a 59-yard run for a touchdown on Notre Dame's first play from scrimmage that appeared in yesterday's Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. It is a splendid work of the photographer's art, in keeping with the excellence of the play itself, depicting Pitt men strewn hither and yon all over the landscape while the runner is just getting clear of the line of rimmage and has inviting holes open to the left and right through which to pursue his chase to the goal line . . . . Coaches and players well may study this picture for its exactitude of detail.

Several players stood out in the plucky fight of Pitt again odds in this game of games . . . . There was Capt. Eddie Baker at quarterback, fighting tooth and nail to the finish, directing the play and backing up the line on defense after Franklin Hood had to leave the game to make room for Jimmy Clark . . . . And Clark himself, with his fine line-bucking, which brought two of the Panthers' three touchdowns . . . . And Ralph Daugherty at center was in there making tackle after tackle . . . . And don't overlook young Reider, who got in late to take the place of Josh Williams at halfback and electrified the fans with his fine running . . . . Reider and Heller are going to make a nifty pair of halves for the Panther team of next fall.—HARRY KECK.

Improvement Though Mild, Now Keynote

By B. C. FORBES

MODEST IMPROVEMENT is the keynote.

There is modest improvement in wheat, substantial improvement in cotton, improvement in varying degrees in most, but not all other farm products.

B. C. Forbes

There is spotty improvement in retail trade, thanks partly to colder weather.

There appears to be some improvement in employment.

There is quite notable, quite impressive improvement in the stock market.

And there is, as a consequence, improvement in sentiment.

EXPANSION IN commercial borrowing and very drastic reduction in borrowing by brokers suggest that business is on the upgrade and that stock speculation is attracting less attention. However, it would be easy to exaggerate the extent of the betterment in general business. Recovery has not been sufficiently pronounced to banish all question as to its permanency. Weak spots still are rather numerous.

Copper, for example, has been cut to 9½ cents. Whenever custom smelters dealing with smaller producers reduce their price in order to move stocks, the larger producers promptly follow suit. Whispers hint that the dominating interests are not straining themselves to maintain price stability, but that they reason that the more unprofitable operations become, the sooner will weak competition be eliminated. Such a policy, if actually the prevailing policy, is fraught with danger to those sponsoring it.

THE ROSY prognostications of Charles M. Schwab, James A. Farrell and John J. Raskob make much more cheerful reading than do the cold facts concerning the steel sales and automobile sales. Both industries are operating at a little better than 50 per cent of capacity. Bank clearings at New York are down nearly 40 per cent from a year ago when the stock panic was raging. For the whole country, the shrinkage is around 35 per cent. Railway traffic figures last week were slightly disappointing. Stoppage of the Montgomery-Ward 3 per cent dividend was not a cheerful incident. And there were other unfavorable developments.

BUT ON the whole, America is unquestionably making moderate progress toward prosperity. Evidence increases that more merchants' stocks are inadequate to meet prospective holiday demands; a scramble for various kinds of merchandise may shortly be witnessed. Contracting for a few materials, although not yet universal, is quietly going on in not a few quarters. The down trend in commodity prices has been checked, at least for the time being. The attitude now taken in the highest financial and business circles is appreciably more hopeful than heretofore.

THE WRITER attaches more importance to actual happenings in the security markets than to sunshine talk. Saying it with dollars is more convincing than saying it with words.

Investment buying of stocks has broadened. Odd lot traders are busier than at any time in recent months. Powerful investors and investment institutions are now arrayed on the buying side, although the disposition is to take stocks at the sellers' price rather than to bid prices up. A natural rather than an artificial market now rules.

One glaring exception must be noted. There was a sudden and vicious raid on VanSweringen stocks, a raid so swift and of such dimensions that it clearly was engineered by bears and was not natural public selling. The governors of the New York Stock Exchange should delve into the facts and publish their findings. The public is in no mood to excuse such destructive gambling.

Confidence is now felt that unemployment emergencies will be coped with effectively. This is greatly helping sentiment in financial and business circles.

In short, gloom is at last beginning to give way to rational reasoning. This should quicken our return to normalcy, to more normal prices for farm and other commodities, to more normal employment, to more normal spending, to more normal prices for sound investment stocks.

RCA-Victor Plants At Camden Active

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 27.—The R. C. A.-Victor plants at Camden, N. J., are now producing 8,700 radio sets daily. This is within several hundred of capacity.

There is no indication of a letdown in demand from dealers and distributors, and production schedule is expected to be fully maintained until after Christmas, according to Alfred Weiland, vice president in charge of production.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stocks Drift Off — Local Stocks Recede

MARKET DRIFTS OFF IN DULL TRADING

Some of Early Losses of 1 to 8 Points Reduced as List Steadies Up Later

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—(AP.)—The stock market drifted lower in light and sluggish trading today.

During the morning the more active shares lost 1 to 8 points, a few breaking through last week's resistance levels, but the list steadied after midday, and some of the losses were reduced.

Farm implements were again under pressure. Case dropped 8 points to a new low, but then rallied 4 from the bottom. International Harvester declined 3 points to new low ground. Westinghouse Electric dropped 5, and shares selling off 2 or more included U. S. Steel, Radio, American Telephone, North American, DuPont, Baltimore and Ohio and Sears Roebuck. Several recovered a point or more. Radio Keith was a firm spot, gaining more than 2 points.

ANOTHER SUSPENSION

It was notable that suspension of another stock exchange member for insolvency failed to bring out any active selling. Although the firm's interests were believed to be relatively small, compared to those of two other firms suspended this fall, the nonchalance with which the market greeted the announcement was regarded in brokerage circles as encouraging.

Weakness of Case was attributed to recent publication of an analysis which suggested that the company might undertake some new financing. So far as could be learned, however, no such plan is now pending. International Harvester apparently declined in sympathy.

The death of Harry Payne Whitney, prominent capitalist, may have caused a little selling, although in recent years the market has largely given up its old-time habit of declining whenever a well-known capitalist dies, for it is not customary nowadays to leave a large estate under such conditions that its settlement will require heavy liquidation of securities in the open market.

EARNINGS REPORTS

The news of the day and the weekend was largely in the form of earnings statements, and the trend in railway earnings continued to reflect the effects of extensive curtailment of operating expenses. Net operating income for the first 24 carriers reporting for September shows a decline of only 16 per cent for last year, while the aggregate for these units for the first nine months show a drop of 25½ per cent.

The decline in the market was regarded in brokerage circles as in a measure a continuation of the profit-taking movement which appeared Saturday. Failure of last week's rally to carry over for more than two days was a little disappointing. Commission houses find that buying still tends to disappear when prices turn upward, for there is little inclination among investors to bid for stocks.

Money conditions remained stationary, with call loans renewing at 2 per cent. Talk is again being heard of a further reduction in the Bank of England rate.

CORPORATE EARNINGS

Union Carbide and Carbon Company in nine months ended September 30, earned $2.22 a share on 6,000,743 shares, against $2.89 on 5,313,818 shares in the like 1929 period. In the September quarter net equaled 80 cents a share against 70 cents in the preceding quarter and $1.14 a share a year ago.

Chicago and Northwestern Railway in the first nine months of 1930 earned $2.60 a share on the common stock after meeting 5 per cent preferred dividend requirements, compared with $7.50 a share on the preferred and $7.36 a share on common under participating provisions in the like period of 1929.

Stewart Warner Corporation earned $1.53 a share in nine months ended September 30 against $5.15 a share in the 1929 similar period. September quarter net equals 35 cents a share, as against 67 cents in the preceding and $1.32 in the quarter ended September 30, 1929.

Diamond Match Company and subsidiaries September quarter consolidated net income equals $3.88 a share, against $4.21 in the preceding quarter and $4.18 in the March quarter. Nine months' net equals $12.27 a share.

Intertype Corporation reports for quarter ended September 30, net profit of $101,454 after depreciation, reserve for taxes, etc., against $235,759 in the third quarter of 1929. Nine months' net totaled $405,252, against $649,236 a year ago.

Beechnut Packing Company reports for nine months ended September 30 profit of $2,288,852 after charges, but before federal taxes, against $2,427,159 in the like period last year. Balance after allowing for estimated federal taxes and dividends on 45 shares of class A preferred outstanding was $2,078,787, equal to $4.66 a share on 446,250 shares of common against $2,138,904, or $5.03 a share, on 425,000 common shares in the 1929 period.

U. S. Steel Not Expected To Declare $1 Extra Dividend.

Directors of the United States Steel Corporation will meet after the close of the market on Tuesday for action on the quarterly dividends due at that time. As usual, the results of operations for the September quarter will be made public at that time. It has been estimated that the corporation will show net profits for the period equivalent to something around $2 a share, which would compare with $3.02 a share in the June quarter and with $5.57 a share reported for the third quarter last year. It will be recalled that it was at the October meeting last year that the corporation ordered the extra dividend of $1 a share. But expectation that such action will be duplicated on Tuesday is not very widespread. Net earnings of $2 a share for the third quarter would bring total profits for the nine months to around $8.45 a share, more than sufficient to cover the full year's $7 common dividend, but at the same time this showing would compare with net of $17.29 reported for the same period last year.

American Cyanamid B Stock on the Curb Exchange, as it moved up about a point to above 12 was an active feature Saturday in the special group. The stock is now in a price range where it is attractive to those who wish to limit their commitments but who have confidence in the long pull prospects of the more important industries. American Cyanamid B is now selling to discount nominal earnings in the immediate future, in contrast with its position a year ago, when even on the crash its extreme low was more than 10 times the 1929 showing of $1.82 a share.

The recent sharp decline in the Van Sweringen issues has not occasioned any special inquiry into the character of the selling in that group of stocks it was learned at the New York Stock Exchange. The business conduct committee, of course, is always disposed to give its attention to stocks which develop especial activity, but thus far nothing in the way of unusual scrutiny has been directed toward the recent turn of events in that section of the railroad list. The action of stocks in the group Saturday was hardly such as suggested the presence of anything in the way of an abnormal short interest. Demand for Erie was rather brisk in the loan crowd late Friday and it is understood that 8,000 shares of the stock were borrowed on a basis of ⅛ premium. With the stock selling off rather sharply Saturday morning chances are that good part of the stock loaned in the last few days would be returned.

This is the season of the year when the country's railroads customarily move to place their orders for necessary new steel equipment to be used in construction and replacement next spring when open weather comes around. It is expected that the steel companies will feel the influence of such buying more fully in the next few weeks, inasmuch as several large roads are now reported preparing to place such business. During the past week orders were placed for a total of upward of 70,000 tons of steel rails by the Canadian Pacific, Northern Pacific and the Union Pacific. Potential business in sight is said to include, according to the Railway Age, Erie business for some 40,000 tons and commitment by the Chicago North Western for approximately 30,000 tons. The American Bridge Company, subsidiary of the steel corporation, has taken orders for some 3,000 tons of structural steel for bridge construction by the Baltimore & Ohio and the New York Central.

The natural gas industry will branch out as the next industrial giant, according to an analysis by a stock exchange house. The survey points out that natural gas is a fuel which costs less to deliver than manufactured gas, and is considered twice as efficient. The natural gas business does not require expensive plants, nor has capital to be expended in idle inventories. It is also universally adoptable for all industrial and domestic purposes.

A few more tests like that of Thursday and Friday may convince American investors and traders that at least a good portion of the best grade stocks are not far from the bottom of the present move. A great deal depends upon the volume of forced liquidation now overhanging the market, and even the best posted Wall Street observers refuse to hazard a guess as to the extent of further liquidation, if any. Some of the bankers go so far as to cite cases of "weak spots" that have been taken care of by extension of further loans and the taking over of large blocks of good grade industrial stocks at satisfactory prices.

Standard Oil Cuts Kentucky Gasoline

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 27.—Standard Oil Company of Kentucky has reduced filling station price of gasoline 2 cents a gallon in Louisville and 1 cent a gallon in the northern half of the state. A cut of 2 cents was made throughout the state several months ago.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Curb prices moved narrowly lower today as the heaviness of the late Saturday trading carried into the new week. Suspension of a brokerage firm from associate membership for insolvency had no effect and the market was dull.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—(AP.)—Following is the list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded (00 omitted in sales column of stock list; 000 omitted in sales column of bond list):

TIME FOR FEAR PAST, BUSINESS MEN WARN

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Business leaders are beginning to warn that pessimism has outlived its usefulness in the present cycle.

An outstanding personality in the Federal Reserve System remarked to me the other day that if there had been more pessimism early in 1929 there would be no need for any now.

John J. Raskob, Du Pont associate and former chairman of the finance committee of the General Motors Corporation, expressed the same thought when he said:

M. S. Rukeyser

"The time for pessimism was 18 months ago. Optimism should be the order of the day."

Talking in a similar vein at Belfast, Ireland, recently, Ambassador Charles G. Dawes observed that he who was without fear in 1929 was a fool and that he who is without hope in 1930 is a fool.

And Dwight W. Morrow insisted that last year was a time for caution and that this is a year for courage.

MERCHANT SHOWS HOW

Business needs action and more two-fisted selling. Philip de Boutillier, president of Best & Co., New York, has set a good example. An analyst of a Wall Street house telephoned the merchant to inquire how business was going on behalf of a client who was considering buying a block of the stock. As the banker was about to hang up, the merchant is reported to have said:

"By the way, have you a charge account at Best's?"

Before the conversation was over, the department store executive arranged to open accounts for the inquirer and for other executives in his firm.

Exceptional executives, instead of merely poring over business curves, undertake to make the curves point upward. "Circumstances," Napoleon was wont to say, "I make circumstances."

COMBAT UNEMPLOYMENT

With the autumn nearly half over, it has become apparent that the ameliorative forces working to restore prosperity will operate slowly, and public officials locally and nationally have become alert to their responsibility to help the unemployed.

Unemployment constitutes the most serious evidence of the imperfections of our modern machine civilization. Society should bear the cost of unemployment instead of callously placing it on the shoulders of unfortunates who are least able to bear it. Meantime, the human aspects of depression emphasize the immense social loss involved in a period of disturbed economic balance, when society fails to produce goods and services as efficiently as it could.

GOLD SHORTAGE BLAMED

In seeking the larger causes of the world-wide depression, one school ascribes the trouble to an inadequate supply of gold. Unquestionably, the use of the world's gold, especially during 1929, was unwise. The high rates paid on brokers' loans here drew free funds from all parts of the world, tending to starve world business of necessary credit. The situation was intensified by a disposition to sterilize gold in New York and Paris. London, which in pre-war times had a dominant share of the world's monetary supply, lent it out more freely.

Thomas T. Read, professor of mining at Columbia University, though predicting a decline in new output of gold, insisted that the supply of gold need cause the banking world no concern, provided discretion is used in handling the present supply.

"As for whether the present world's gold production is sufficient to meet the banking needs of the world, that is one for the bankers to answer. Perhaps I may be permitted to say that I absolutely agree with George E. Roberts, of the National City Bank.

DECLARES STOCK AMPLE

"His opinion, as I understand it, is that the present world's stock of gold is ample for present and future banking needs, and that if the world's output of gold completely ceased in the next quarter-century, the bankers would still be able to manage their business successfully."

Sir Josiah Stamp, one of the authors of the Young plan, expressed the hope that the new Bank for International Settlements would prove an instrument for the discrete handling of the world's gold supply. As for the future supply of gold, Prof. Read said:

"We expect that it will begin to decline slowly within the next 10 years unless some new gold product district is discovered in the meanwhile.

"No one can say positively that a new gold district will not be discovered; probably some small ones will be, but mining engineers would be almost unanimous in doubting that any very big one will be found."

Superior Steel's Output Increased

Production of the Superior Steel Corporation is being increased by the placing of a large rush order for both hot and cold rolled strips by the Syracuse Washing Machine Corporation. The order, which is the largest received by Superior in several months, will provide steel for the production of the new model Easy Washing Machine.

Check Payments Show How Much Business Has Declined—By Districts—in 1930

Chart shows the decrease in per cent in the volume of check payments in each of the 12 Federal Reserve Districts during the first 38 weeks of 1930 (to September 20) as compared with the corresponding period of 1929. These 12 districts cover 141 of the largest cities. Source: Federal Reserve Board.

Check payments, which form one of the best single indexes to the volume of general business, are used here to show how much business is "off" in the various sections of the country. The New York District shows the largest decrease—31.1%. But much of it is due to the decline in the volume of stock market transactions. The decrease in the 140 cities outside of New York is only 13.2%.

DAILY TRUE STORY

A Mountain Idyl

Hal Garner rested his squirrel gun against the sycamore in Wes Tuttle's front yard and stared up toward the solid old Tuttle homestead, made a century before from square-hewn logs.

There was a glimpse of a pink sun bonnet at the back door. Hal could see it because the front door was open and the hall ran straight through the middle of the house.

The sound of a hoot owl was heard.

Hoot owls do not hoot at 2 o'clock in the afternoon in the Tennessee mountains—or anywhere else.

The pink sunbonnet disappeared from the back door and the tip of it could be seen a moment later around a corner of the house.

The pink sunbonnet then moved toward where Hal Garner was standing.

"You better git going, Hal," Luella said.

"Reckon your Pap won't eat me," Loo.

"He'll be considerably riled up, Hal."

"No reason to—I'm no epidemic."

"You talk big since you was livin' in the city, Hal. And how is it you-all come home? Is you quit being a lawyer?"

"Shucks, Loo, of course not. I'm doing right well at the lawyer business. I come home for two reasons. One is because you live here and the other is because I'm going to take you back with me."

"Reckon Pap would jest about shoot you, Hal, afore he'd let me do that."

Father Objects

"We'd be married."

"Reckon I give you credit for being that kind of a feller, Hal. You best git."

"Don't you want to go with me? Don't you want to marry me?"

"You know I do—but Pap—"

"If we were to just slip away and be married and settle down in Knoxville, your Pap would get reconciled."

"I haven't a living chance to git away, Hal. Pap, he watches me like a hawk. He doesn't—git out—here he comes!"

"I'm not the runnin' kind, Loo."

"Hal Garner, huh?" the old man said.

"Yes, sir."

"Trying to take my Loo away, huh?"

"Making no effort, Mr. Tuttle. I've been home on a vacation and thought I'd say 'Howdy' to Loo before I went back."

"Have you said 'howdy?' "

"Yes."

"Then say 'Good evenin'" an' git!"

"No hurry—"

"You heered me say 'Git,' Hal Garner!"

Hal Departs

"He can—all them Garners was perlite. He's bid ye a word."

"Well, Hal, good luck," Loo said, rather sadly.

"Au revoir!"

Hal picked up his rifle, made a half-salute at the old man and walked away. He didn't look back. He wasn't worried. Although the Tuttles and the Garners had been enemies through half a century, they never shot a man in the back. More than that, one man never shot another if he wasn't armed. It had been a gentleman's feud. There hadn't been any shooting for 20 years, but the enmity had kept up to the extent that they never visited, never had anything to do with each other and never failed to nod gravely and say a gruff "Howdy." Nothing petty about either side.

And until Hal Garner, who had become a lawyer and was making good in Knoxville, had grown up and fallen in love with Luella Tuttle, there had been no hint of any fondness between the opposite sexes of the Garners and Tuttles.

Wes Tuttle was quite a religious man, after the way of the religious mountaineers. He took his corn liquor, he smoked his pipe, but he owed no man and used no profanity. He was regarded as a "right smart Godly man" in those parts. He even read lay sermons when the minister was away.

"If Hal Garner comes tryin' to run off with Loo," he said to his sister, "you take th' old fowlin' piece. Hit's loaded with bird shot—it won't kill him, but it will keep him awful busy for a long while pickin' bird shot outen him."

The rural free delivery man brought Luella a picture postcard. Old Wes studied it with care before he turned it over to her.

"Reckon Hal Garner knows that when a Tuttle says his word, he means it. He's gone back to his ungodly law business," he said, handing Luella the card.

Nothing much happened. One day was like another. There was the day when a dusty, rattly old tin car with a steaming radiator drove into the yard. A man with a black beard, and what appeared to be gold wire rings in his ears climbed out.

"Pleez, could I let her cool, and you gif me water for her before she bust?"

"Sartin," Luella's aunt said. "Loo, fetch the furrin man some water for that bilin'-over contrapshun of his."

"She's too hot. She bust if I water her now already. Perhaps your sister like to seen some things?"

A big black bag was opened. It contained a brilliant array of laces, handkerchiefs, aprons, table linens, ribbons and other oddments, such as an ordinary man would be unable to classify.

"No need to waste yore time, stranger—I ain't buyin'," Mrs. Williams said.

The man's white teeth flashed beneath his black beard. He put water in the radiator while Loo and her aunt admired the things. He came back then. Deftly he brought out some of the material, a sort of sateen, very shimmery. It was black with silver figures, or they seemed like silver.

Luella Kidnaped

"For you, young ladee," he said to Mrs. Williams, "a fine dress—sefen yard—two dollar."

Luella and her aunt stared at each other in amazement. Five dollars would have been cheap, and they knew it.

Well, you gif me water for her before she bust, I let go my profit—a dollar and a halluf," he said.

Mrs. Williams tested the material, smelled it, wetted it with her tongue, pulled it and nodded.

"Reckon I'll take it—I'll go get the money," Mrs. Williams said, and she hurried into the house.

The "furrener" lifted Luella into his car, leaving the piece of dress goods on the bench. He tossed the big black bag into the car, hopped in himself and drove away.

Mrs. Williams rushed to the door. She rushed back and got the fowling piece.

It was too late. The car was down the slope and around the bend.

The "furriner's" black beard came off.

"I expected you'd yell like all git-out when I histed you into the car, Loo," Hal said.

"I'd have scratched your eyes out, Hal, if I hadn't seen that silver ring on your finger that I gave you two years ago. If she hadn't gone in for money, I'd have sent her in for some—I'd have got rid of her for a minute. Where we going, Hal?"

"To a train, to Knoxville, to a minister's house and then to a little cottage I got rigged up for us, Loo."

He stopped the car and kissed her.

"Don't miss that train, Hal," she cried.

They didn't.

Good Navy Insures Peace

Look back over American history and you will find that it was those leaders who never flinched from telling the people "The whole truth"—or what they themselves honestly believed to be the truth—who most often succeeded in carrying their proposals through.

Theodore Roosevelt never flinched from telling the American people "The whole truth" about their Navy. And they believed him and supported his leadership, and set about building a Navy commensurate with their powers and their needs.

It is, therefore, logical that the American people should every year set aside today—Roosevelt's birthday—as Navy Day, and that the government should welcome the public on board all naval vessels in port and in all naval establishments ashore.

A true observance of Navy Day quickens the interest of the American people in their Navy. It helps to give them a better understanding of its activities, its needs and purposes.

"We are a very rich country," said Theodore Roosevelt. "Vast in extent of territory and great in population, a country, moreover, which has an Army diminutive, indeed, when compared with that of any other first-class power. We have deliberately made our own foreign policies, which demand the possession of a first-class Navy. A good Navy is not a provocative of war. It is the surest guarantee of peace."

Contrary to a misunderstanding that is widespread the Navy is not like a fire engine company, idle or merely exercising itself until a conflagration breaks out. Its primary function is to be so obviously competent to support the national policies and to safeguard the rights and interests of the United States that they will be everywhere respected. This is a constant peace-time activity which helps to prevent war and promote peace.

With the end of the great war, history began to repeat itself in regard to the Navy. Instead of building it up our head servants at Washington have turned a deaf ear to the warnings of Roosevelt and his great predecessors in the presidential office and neglected the Navy.

As a result the American people as they observe today as Navy Day and honor the memory of Roosevelt, find themselves face to face with the fact that the Navy is obviously not ready, and that the Navy is obviously not commensurate with the power or the needs of the United States. If they will take to heart the lesson of this Navy Day, all Americans will demand that their head servants in Washington stop sacrificing and hamstringing the Navy and set about its upbuilding, not next year nor five years hence, but now.

Child Welfare Study

Some Good Suggestions Are Made In Report of Pittsburgh Federation of Social Agencies.

It will come as a surprise to the people of Allegheny County to be informed that the county is oversupplied with institutions for the care of children. Yet the Pittsburgh Federation of Social Agencies makes the statement in the first of a series of reports based on its child welfare study.

What the Federation would like to see is the transfer of some of the 4,000 children in our orphanages to private homes, where they could live a normal family life. There is no controverting their argument.

Mass treatment is out of place in child training. Every child must have individual care and attention if he is to make the most of his possibilities. What is good for one may not be good for another.

Some sensible suggestions are made in the report. It is suggested, for instance, that it might be much better for the community to contribute to the maintenance of poor families, so that the children may be raised at home, than to let the children be committed to institutions which require the support of the public.

If a widow, with a little help, can raise her children herself, and, without help, must send them to an orphanage, she should have the help.

Blue Law Arguments

Reasons Presented at Philadelphia Meeting for Opposing Repeal of Sunday Statute Will Not Bear Analysis.

The Philadelphia City Council, which is thinking of recommending to the Legislature the repeal of the Blue Law of 1794, which makes it a crime to indulge in innocent amusements on Sunday, gave a hearing last Friday to a group who favor retention of the law.

Arguments in great variety were submitted, but they were arguments of a kind that will not bear analysis.

Outside of the religious argument, the reasons presented for advocating continuance of the ban on Sunday sports and amusements had an insincere ring. They rested for the most part on sophistry, prejudice or unwarranted assumption.

It was argued that Pennsylvania has prospered under the Blue Law, therefore the Blue Law should be given credit for its prosperity.

It was argued that because of its antiquity the Blue Law should be held in veneration.

It was argued that the Blue Law is necessary for the protection of people who object to noise on Sunday.

Pianos

More Popular Than Ever.

You might think that few pianos would be sold these days—what with the popularity of radio and talking pictures, the "business depression," and all that. Pianos are a luxury. They take up space. Moreover, you can't play them by turning a knob.

One of the largest piano companies in the United States, however, writes to say that its sales last month were considerably in excess of those in September, 1929, when "prosperity" was at its height. The increase at one of its stores, in fact, was 15 per cent. A good product, plus public demand, plus consistent advertising, was responsible for this showing.

You can draw several morals from this, if interested in morals, or prosperity, or pianos. One is that new inventions don't necessarily oust the old. The radio, bringing music to countless homes that never had it before, has spread the desire for good music, and for good musical instruments also.

Another is that a nation which can still buy pianos is hardly as poverty-stricken as you might think.

A third is that advertising pays.

None of these is news. In fact, each is a platitude. But a platitude is a truth you hear so often that you forget it. Hence these.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

Shooting Rabbits

Rabbit season is open. So never look a gift coat in the mouth.

Rabbit season shooting is here. We can't do anything about it. Eleven sportsmen have already been seriously injured.

It ain't so bad being mistaken for a lion or an elephant. But when you are lying in the hospital surrounded by terrific luxuries, what good does it do when your pal says:

"Sorry, Joe, I thought you were a rabbit."

It is a thick blow to your vanity after you have spent your life trying not to look like one.

Two friends starting out on a shooting excursion should always go into executive session and talk it over thusly:

"Oscar, we are going to shoot rabbits. Did you ever see one?"

"No, but I never saw a pearl-handled kitchen mop. I have a license to shoot rabbits. I am going to start shooting little rabbits and work up to old, experienced ones."

"Do you know what a rabbit looks like? He has ears like this. He's got legs wherever he needs them. Personally, instead of shooting rabbits I think it's much safer to get a big spoon and dig for them in a stew."

"Now, I ain't mad at you. You're not mad at me. The rabbits are not mad at us."

"If you're going to turn this shooting into a duel why not challen the rabbits?"

"We leave our guns home for this first trip and see if we can't sneak up on the rabbits, overcome them with our dominant personality. In order to avoid a mistake I'll wear a red coat, you wear a red hat and we'll make the rabbits wear red pants."

"Then the man who comes home alive will have a complete red uniform and can play Santa Claus to the other man's widow and orphans."

"A rabbit hunt is worse than war because there ain't any pensions."

So, being intelligent citizens of the third class, they postponed the rabbit hunt and spent the money on a nice buggy whip with a whistle in the handle.

THE CHICAGO PLANETARIUM

By Archibald Henderson

Astronomy is one of the most fascinating of all scientific subjects. It deals with the entire visible universe of stars, planets and other bodies in inter-stellar space. Furthermore, it plumbs the depths of this mysterious inter-stellar space, and studies countless objects—thousands, millions—which are not visible to the naked eye, and would remain invisible forever, save for the marvelous instruments of the telescope, the spectroscope and the camera.

As students of the technical, mathematical and observational aspects of astronomy will tell you, astronomy is very difficult. For many people seem unable to visualize, or do so only with great difficulty, the movements of the heavenly bodies and their relations to each other. The teacher of astronomy has to draw elaborate diagrams, on a plane blackboard, of phenomena, which take place in space. Objects and movements in three-dimensional space have to be represented on a two-dimensional plane sheet of paper or blackboard. Some people readily understand such diagrams; others, unfortunately, lacking the visualizing faculty, do not.

Go into a museum containing old scientific and astronomical instruments, and you will doubtless see a curious-looking mechanical model known as an orrery. This is the instrument which has been used for centuries by astronomers to explain or actually demonstrate the movements of the planets and the satellites. In the center of the model is a white globe representing the sun. Further out, at differing distances, at the ends of rods are smaller globes, representing the planets. From the main rods radiate other branching rods, at the extremities of which are still smaller globes representing the satellites of the planets. The whole instrument is like a mechanical bush with globular buds at the ends of the rectilinear branches. It is geared up so that, by turning a crank, the various portions of the mechanism perform certain motions duplicating, on a small and greatly foreshortened scale, the motions of the heavenly bodies in space, individually and with relationship to each other.

Some years ago, Dr. Oskar von Miller, creator of the Dutsches Museum of Munich, conceived the idea of constructing a representation of the firmament by means of a dome simulating the overaching canopy of the heavens. Upon this stage, the planets and stars were to be the actors. All the principal features of the heavens were to be projected, in the form of points of light, upon this great dome. The planets and stars, Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and the other principal stellar objects, were to be shown moving among the fixed stars just as they actually do in the sky. The dome must be sprinkled not with a few, but literally with thousands of stars.

After five years of labor, Dr. Walter Bauersfeld, chief engineer of the great Zeiss works, completed the first planetarium under Dr. Von Miller's direction. Although it proved very expensive to construct the result was justified by the immense popularity with which it was greeted by the public. Cities began to vie with each other in constructing these fascinating new astronomical theaters. There are many such in Europe, Germany alone having 18 planetaria.

There is but one in the United States, that at Chicago, very recently completed. It is the gift of Max Adler, a philanthropist, who expended about $600,000 in the construction of the planetarium and a suitable building to house it.

This building stands on an artificial island in Lake Michigan and is an object of beauty because of its architectural simplicity. On the mainland near at hand, stand the Field Museum of Natural History and the new Shedd Aquarium. All three institutions, devoted to science, will constitute integral parts of the exposition to be held at Chicago, in commemoration of a century of progress.

In the center of the building stands a huge light projector, which has a frame running on a track laid in the floor. The demonstration is carried on in semi-darkness, which makes the dome seem excessively remote. By pressing buttons the Milky Way and 2,700 stars are projected against the dome; the great nebula in Andromeda, the Orion nebula, the Beehive cluster in Cancer, Venus, what you will. As Stromgren, of the Copenhagen Observatory, says regarding the planetarium: "It is a school, a theater, a cinema in one."

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Novels—remember how you devoured them when you were a youngster? What feats and furies, thrills and ecstasies you passed through in 300 pages; what a sigh of relief you gave when the plot was finished and everything came out right!

Novels—unconsciously they shaped your whole attitude toward life. For, of course, this was the way life would be. Built around a plot. Filled with conflicts. But sooner or later, coming to a grand crisis and solution.

And so you went out to find your story. But—you haven't found it yet, have you? Always you feel that you're just on the verge of it. Pretty soon the plot will begin. Half a dozen times you thought it had begun. When you fell in love with Edith—or Ed—you thought that life was getting somewhere at last. When you finally managed to take that trip to Europe . . . or buy that new car . . . or get that new contract . . . then again you thought that things were shaping up. But they weren't. After it was done—after the first thrills were over—there was the same old secret hunger and unrest . . . the same old feeling that the show hadn't started.

And you're getting discouraged. Five years ago, or ten, you were rarin' to go. And now what are you doing? Just marking time. Going places you don't want to go? Doing things you don't want to do. Fussing over a thousand trifles in which you haven't a particle of interest. Fumbling around, wondering when you'll "begin to live."

You've begun already. This IS life. You're in it now. You're in it as much as you'll ever be in it. Things will never "shapeup." Life has no plots. It does not arrange itself in patterns nor arrive at solutions. Life just goes on and on, interminable as a tide.

Life IS a tide—a vague, vast, groping tide, endlessly rising endlessly falling, fumbling its way through the fog to some far shrouded shore. You are part of that tide. You will always be part of a story, but you will never get there. You will always be part of a story but you will never know what the story is all about—

That is life. You can't change it. And it's up to you whether it makes a mess of you—or a man. If you're going to get mad at life because it won't shape up into a story, get mad and see what good it does you! All about you, you'll see other people who got mad at life—people who spend their days sticking out their tongues and calling life an old meanie. What does it buy them?

And all about you, you will see others who have ravelled out because life was too much for them. Or dug themselves into holes. Or who are still chasing feverishly about, looking for a solution—

But here and there you will find lusty souls who are quite willing to accept life as is and take the chances. They aren't mad at life because its too big for their little plots or too mysterious for their solutions. They make themselves part of that bigness, they make an adventure of the mystery, they go with the tide. And though they are often poor and ignorant and obscure, the tang of the tide is in their blood and there is something of the freedom of the vagabond winds.

Life — that's life — you can't change it. But you can launch yourself into its tide—set sail, with sealed papers—

Isn't It So?

A devoted son is one that permits his father to drive his own car once in a while.

Success may reward those with a pull, but it comes quicker to those who get out and push.

In the Rear—The Gallows

England Was Once Severe.

BRITISH EXECUTION OF MUTINEERS, 51 YEARS AGO

This reprint of an old illustration, published in the London Graphic 51 years ago, reminds you that Britons have changed in their methods of dealing with rebellious subjects.

Growing richer and greater the Empire seems to grow more gentle. Old-fashioned Britishers would call it "softer."

A thin wasted little man named Gandhi can upset 300,000,000 British subjects in India, preach and bring about disobedience, cost the Empire hundreds of millions of pounds in the long run.

The British endure it all patiently. They put Gandhi in jail for a little while, and when he will not eat, they let him out again.

It was not so 51 years ago.

The two natives in the foreground with hands fastened behind them, are on their way to the gallows to be hanged. You see a busy British gallows on the hill in the background. It was planted where the natives could see it and the men swinging on it.

The two condemned walking to their doom, rebelled against British power. In a few minutes the British will strangle them both, thus strengthening British power through fear.

Under this picture was written, "51 years ago."

"Our engraving represents two Cabal mutineers on their way to be hanged. The gallows is a strong horizontal beam, supported on two uprights firmly fixed in the ground, and is constructed so that five men may be executed at the same time. All arrangements for the speedy execution of the condemned are excellently managed by the Provost-Sergeant and his assistants. Up to November 12 about seventy-three men were executed; no natives of the country, however, appear as spectators."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Bedtimes to the station and missed a tram for Boston. So prowling about the shops in the airless tunnel running to 45th street and thought of a neat mystery story plot, yet when I telephoned it to Arthur Somers Roche detected no enthusiasm soever.

To breakfast and asked a lady across the table for the sugar bowl, but she swished her newspaper and scowled. And upon departing was almost tempted to say: "My error, Countess Sourpuss." Walking along the avenue passed Will H. Hayes, Nat J. Ferber, Arthur Samuels and Gertrude Lawrence.

In the evening to see the harlequinades of Joe Cook, very amusing, and stopped on my way home to watch street gamins rolling dice in a Forty-seventh street doorway until one inquired: "What are youse, a fly cop?" Thence to my quarters to read "Doubloons," by Charles B. Driscoll until late.

* * *

The Edgar Allen Poe neighborhood around One Hundred and Forty-ninth street and the Grand Concourse has taken on a distinctly Poeish flavor. A new apartment house is to be named "The Edgar Allen Poe," also a Poe drug store, an E. A. Poe cafeteria and a movie house called "The Poe" are on the way.

* * *

The new Waldorf is to have a special corps to attend to unfurling flags for the arrival of distinguished visitors on assumption dignitaries will stop at the new hostelery as they did the old. The idea will be to have the proper flag flying as soon as the ink is dry on the guest register.

* * *

A gentleman recently went to the roof of his 42-storied office building with an architect to see about some improvements. He was following the architect totally absorbed in explanations of proposed changes. Suddenly he froze with the horrors, his hair literally lifting. In following he had stepped down on an 18-inch ledge to circle a chimney and was looking dizzily into the street below. This was more than six weeks ago and several times a day he sways and clutches for something.

* * *

The impulse suddenly to leap from high places afflicts many. An executive in a 60-story building has all his windows blackened to a certain height so he cannot gaze into the street.

A pet phobia of mine concerns a wild-eyed impulse to dash in front of approaching trains or step into an aeroplane propeller singing at top speed. The brown waste basket on the right is for the "Why don't you?" letters in order of arrival.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

You like to be the center of attraction and to gain this end frequently you are willing to risk your reputation for being a person of good sense.

It is poor judgment to acquire little tricks of speech and manner just to be in the limelight.

If you are a professional entertainer and make your living thus there is some excuse for it.

But if you are supposed to fill a different position in life, clowning is bound to be a drawback to you.

People like those who are companionable, but it does not follow that they favor those who talk much and indulge in many antics.

In fact some of the most satisfying companions are those who talk little and use no artificial means to be entertaining.

It is possible to be interesting without being amusing.

Intelligent persons like to be enlightened.

Give those you seek to entertain something of value that is interesting.
